The Death Flight.
No Favored Religion.
Mr. Gifford's Figures.
No Big War Man.

—By Arthur Brisbane—

(Copyright, 1927, by Star Co.)

WHEN a man flies over the Pacific or Atlantic and lands safely, the world is interested—there are so many risks.

Last night Mrs. Ruth Snyder and Henry Judd Gray, convicted of killing Mrs. Snyder's husband, sat in the death house listening to preparations for William Wagner's trip to the electric chair. His crime was not "interesting," so very few lines will tell of the "trip" he was to take through the ether early this morning.

Whither did he fly, how did he land, what did he find at the other end of his journey? Answers to those questions would be worth something, for we must all make the flight.

Various religions have their headquarters in Jerusalem, Protestant, Catholic, Greek Church and Judaism—the last certainly with the original claim. The earthquake, shaking and destroying impartially, allows no particular religion to claim an exemption due to divine intervention.

Greek, Protestant and Catholic shrines have been injured, and even the Jewish University is hard hit, its library and laboratory destroyed. The Talmud says Jerusalem was destroyed because the schools were neglected. The fate of the university is hard to understand.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company earned in the first six months of this year more than sixty-three million dollars, equal to $126,000,000 a year, five and a half per cent. on two billions. All that money comes from ONE IDEA developed by Mr. Bell. Take care of your ideas and they may some day take care of you.

Walter S. Gifford, president of the telephone company, who publishes these figures, is an able citizen, and is reaching out over the world for other telephone empires to conquer.

Nicholas Murray Butler says the great war brought forth no single giant figure. Cyrus H. K. Curtis thinks history will disagree with him, "Woodrow Wilson will stand out in large outline if the League of Nations is a success" and "Mussolini may be a giant if his challenge to democracy shall prevail."

Mussolini will stand out as a real part of history, whether he carries through his program or suffers the fate of Rienzi. Lenin, whose body is preserved and exhibited in Moscow, will interest history more than anybody else in the war. He cut the long line of autocracy in Russia.

The war certainly produced no outstanding military genius. Any one of three, Alexander, Caesar or Napoleon, would have found a way to get across those little trenches, and every one of them would have known enough to concentrate in gigantic volume

HEAT KILLS 11 IN N. E.

With the mercury again climbing into the nineties, and with the Federal Weather Bureau admitting that no relief is in sight, Boston and New England today suffered again under the almost intolerable heat and humidity that has caused death and suffering for the past seventy-two hours.

At 1 oclock a temperature of ninety degrees was reported by the weather bureau, with every indication that yesterday's high mark of ninety-four degrees would be reached if not surpassed before the day was over.

The eleventh death in New England in twenty-four hours as a result of the intense heat, was re-

200 IN PERIL AS HUB SHIP IS SUNK

One man was drowned and more than 200 other passengers and members of the crews were imperilled today when the Holland-American liner Veendam rammed and sank the Boston-bound Norwegian freighter Sagaland, four miles east of Nantucket lightship.

The man drowned was one of the crew of twenty-five men hurled into the rolling seas in a fight for their lives when the huge

DRYS BREAK PROMISE TO NOMINATE M'ADOO

By EDWIN J. CLAPP

(Copyright, 1927, by Boston Evening American, Inc. All Rights Reserved. Reproduction Either in Whole or Part Prohibited.)

The political power of the Anti-Saloon League is clearly evidenced by a letter from William G. McAdoo, seeking its support in his fight for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1924.

This letter, written three months before the Democratic National Convention in Madison Square Garden, New York, and now reposing in the secret records of the Anti-Saloon League, was sent by special messenger to Dr. Howard H. Russell, founder of the League.

The letter was carried by Nathan Newby of Los Angeles, a member of the executive committee of the church federation of that city. He delivered it to Dr. Russell in Indianapolis, where the leaders of the Anti-Saloon League were in session. The letter is printed in full herewith.

St. Andrews, Scotland, July 15—Robert T. Jones, Jr., gentleman and golfer first, last and always, today won the British open golf championship for the second successive year and, in so doing, broke all scoring records for the open championship, both here and in his own country, America.

While a distinctly British gallery went wild over the invader, Jones finished the seventy-two hole dis-

SMITH DOWN IN SEAS; RUNS SHORT OF GAS

San Francisco, July 15 (A.P.).—A message received by the Navy here, intercepted from the monoplane City of Oakland, U. S. to Hawaii flier, said it was "landing in the water." "Landing in the water. Rush help. About 500 miles northeast of Paia, Maui," said the message from the monoplane. The message was intercepted at 7 a. m., Pacific time.

Honolulu, July 15 (A.P.).—The radio corporation intercepted from the monoplane City of Oakland a message giving its position at 7:45 a. m., Pacific time, and stating, "We are going to land in the sea. We have a rubber lifeboat, but

PLANES SENT OUT TO SEARCH FOR SMITH

Honolulu, July 15.—The first news that Smith's gasoline supply was running low and that he might not be able to complete his air voyage brought the entire facilities of the islands to his assistance. Every ship near his position was notified. All within a radius of 100 miles were asked to rush to the scene. The liner Calawaii, which had picked up Smith's calls, was already on its way, as were two other vessels. Naval seaplanes were dispatched from Pearl Harbor base at thirty-minute intervals. The Smith plane hit the water 6:15 a. m., Honolulu time.

FLIER, RUNNING SHORT OF GAS, SENDS S.O.S. CALL FOR HELP

send help." The steamer Wilhelmina, going to the aid of the distressed plane, reported as follows: "The plane called us a few minutes ago. Did not give his positoin. We have heard nothing further."

Honolulu, July 15 (A.P.).—The monoplane City of Oakland was still in the air at 7:25 A. M., Pacific time, frantically sending out S. O. S. calls. All stations were ordered off the air so they might be heard.

Of the three ships which went to her aid, the steamer Wilhelmina presumably was the nearest—about 200 miles from the position reported in the first distress call. The army transport Kenowis and the liner President Pierce, both in the general vicinity, responded to the call.

Preparations have been started at Wheeler Field to launch the big Army Fokker, Bird of Paradise, which Maitland and Hegenberger flew to Honolulu, and send it to the aid of the City of Oakland, although earlier Major Miller, commandant of Wheeler Field, had announced the Fokker plane would not be sent unless the steamers were unable to locate Smith's plane.

Major Miller said the big Fokker had only a five-hour gas supply which would be scarcely enough to take her to the scene but that "if an emergency arises we will fill her tanks and proceed out to sea in search of Smith."

A dispatch picked up by the Navy here from the City of Oakland said the plane had a four-hour supply of gasoline instead of a one-hour supply and called for help.

The second message came from the plane soon after it had sent an S.O.S. call giving its position at 700 miles east and north of Paia, Island of Maui, and asking planes and tugs to rush to its rescue.

When the second call was received at 6:20 Pacific time, the Wilhelmina had left her course and gone to the aid of the aviator.

Even with a four-hour gasoline supply the chances of the plane to reach land were practically nothing. Their fuel supply at the rate they were traveling would carry them scarcely more than 450 miles of the 700 miles to land.

The S.O.S. message received by the steamer Calawaii and relayed by that ship to the Navy here gave the plane's position and said: "Rush help. Have run out of gas."

The distress message caught by the Wilhelmina and Kenowis said: "Short of gas. May come down any time. Enough to last about an hour. We are 700 miles northeast of Paia."

The Wilhelmina, going to the aid of the distressed monoplane at 6:40 a. m., relayed the following message, presumably referring to the aviators: "About 500 miles northeast of Paia. Rush help."

An army message timed 6:36 a. m. Pacific time, confirmed the report that the monoplane had only a four-hours gasoline supply and announced that the steamer Wilhelmina would continue moving to its rescue.

With all ships and shore stations in the western Pacific area aware of the monoplane's distress, neither Smith nor Bronte know whether their call for help has been heard or answered. Their radio receiving set broke down shortly after taking off from Oakland.

Flier Smith Is Chased by Jinx

The jinx which has trailed Smith at varying distances since he first essayed the hop to Hawaii June 28, still was hovering about the little plane four hours after the take-off, when Bronte reported his receiving set had gone wrong.

That left the fliers wholly on their own in determining their position, for they were unable to receive communication from ships along the way.

Loss of the receiving set failed to perturb Bronte, however, and he continued to report "everything fine," in spite of the fog which enveloped them for at least the first 480 miles.

The first report during the early hours—that of the steamer La Purisima, brought joy to many who remained awake here in hope of hearing from the plane.

The ship's time spoken of in the La Purisima message would be an hour earlier than Pacific time, so that midnight at that point would be 1 o'clock a. m., San Francisco

The La Purisima added that radio reports from Honolulu said the San Francisco beacon signals were coming in fine.

CUPID TAKES A HAND.

Cupid took a hand in the flight shortly before the takeoff, when Miss Marjorie Brown of San Francisco, wept as she kissed Smith goodby and announced that they would he married if the flight was successful.

Bronte, globe-trotting master mariner at twenty-nine, who has written a textbook on navigation, but cannot smother his desire to be a lawyer, manifested interest in a New York girl, Miss Mary Rose McGlynn. Just before the plane streaked down the runway Bronte beckoned her to the cabin. She ran to him with a smile and wished him good luck. They clasped hands.

Maitland and Hegenberger bade them goodby, after advising them to choose an altitude of about 5,000 feet for the best trade winds and giving them other pointers. E. W. Smith, father of the pilot, smiled as he expressed confidence in the success of the venture.

Navy Rescue Work in Charge of Admiral

Washington, July 15 (A.P.).—Dispatching of rescue craft to the aid of the Hawaiian fliers is within the discretion of Rear-Admiral McDonald, commandant of the naval station in Hawaii, it was stated today at the Navy Department.

Officials said Admiral McDonald had authority to take whatever steps he deemed necessary, including the sending to sea of two destroyers now at Pearl Harbor, and the ordering out of seaplanes at the naval flying base.

Martin T. Joyce, one of the signers, is secretary-treasurer of the Massachusetts branch of the American Federation of Labor. Most of the other signers are officers of the League.

The petition will automatically go before the next session of the Legislature, provided 15,000 names of certified voters are added to the original ten signatures. If the Legislature rejects the petition or fails to take definite action, 5,000 more names will place the question on the ballot in November eletion in 1928.

The question as it is proposed to appear on the ballot is:

"Shall the Senators from this Commonwealth and the Representatives in Congress from this district be requested to support a constitutional amendment to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States known as the prohibition amendment?"

The vote would be tabulated by the Secretary of State and copies sent to each Massachusetts Senator and Representative in Congress.

The result would not be regarded as an instruction to the Senators and Representatives, but would be taken as the "opinion and will" of the several congressional districts.

freight steamship dove beneath the waves.

According to radio dispatches from the Veendam, bound for New York, all 169 of her passengers are safe, as well as the members of her crew.

The Veendam's passenger list cites 73 first class passengers, 30 in the second class and 66 third class. She was out of Rotterdam July 5 and left Southampton, Eng., on July 6, due in New York today at 7 p. m.

Meagre details given in the radio messages were that the Sagaland survivors were picked up by the crew of the liner and are being taken to New York.

It was just after dawn when the two vessels came together in the main ship lane. The far greater weight of the liner, which grosses 13,000 tons, proved too much for the smaller freighter of but 2,677 tons register when the crash came.

The freighter, cracked open by the impact, went under.

The Sagaland, a ship only six years old, was carrying a cargo of 23,282 bags of sugar from Manzanillo, Cuba, to Boston, consigned to the American Sugar Refinery. She was in command of Captain Petersen and was under charter of the West India Steamship Company. Her crew numbered usually from 25 to 30 men.

Captain William Krol, a Hollander, is in command of the Veendam.

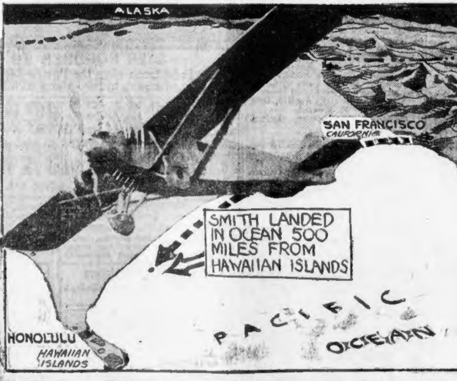
The two family names most common in America—possibly the world—were linked when the last act of Ernest Smith as he hopped off for Hawaii in the "City of Oakland" was to bid goodbye to Miss Marjorie Brown, long his friend.



WHERE SMITH RAN OUT OF GAS
Smith and Bronte were winging their way over the Pacific to Honolulu and everything went well until this morning when they found they did not have enough gas. Then came the S. O. S. and ships rushed to their aid.

‘CAPTIVE’ GIRL ELOPER SOBS LOVE WOES

While guards—relatives—sat on the lawn around her home and her suitor was being arraigned in Brighton Court as her abductor, Eleanor Laham, sixteen, rushed to a window of the Brighton house today and cried:

“I love him; I love him.”

A feminine form appeared behind her, an arm reached out, the hysterical girl, who is virtually a prisoner, was dragged away from the window and the shades were pulled down.

The cry to the winds by the imprisoned sweetheart was only one of a number of stirring events making up this day's developments subsequent to the flight of pretty Eleanor and her beau of the same name, George Laham of West Roxbury, twenty-four, an insurance agent.

First George, accompanied by his father and a group of friends, went into Brighton Court and his case was continued until July 29.

At about the same time a girl reported was being repulsed at Eleanor's home in Radnor road, by (1) the grandmother, (2) the mother, (3 the father, (4) a varied assortment of brothers, sisters, aunts, uncles, cousins, second cousins and just relatives.

J. F. CLARK AND WIFE RETURN FROM WILDS

San Francisco, Calif., July 15.—Two tiger skins, each more than eight feet long, are the distinctive trophies brought back from the Orient by a couple on their return from a jungle honeymoon.

Mr. and Mrs. James Freeman Clarke of Boston arrived in San Francisco on the Dollar liner President Taft, concluding one of the most unusual honeymoons on record. For five weeks they lived in a palm leaf hut in the heart of the Cochin-China jungle, with only a French guide and six natives for company.

Mrs. Clarke, until her marriage February 12 in Lindsay, Ontario, was Miss Aileen Hughes, daughter of the late Sir Sam Hughes, Canadian Minister of Militia during the war. She is a huntress of note, having met her husband during a hunting trip in Africa two years ago.

“We each wanted to shoot tigers,” said Mrs. Clarke, chatting on board the liner as it steamed into San Francisco bay. Trim in her dark blue traveling suit and close-fitting felt hat, she looked far more like the conventional traveller than a fearless hunter of ferocious tigers.

“I was frightened at first,” she confessed, a smile lighting her face, bronzed by the tropic suns. “The

CLIMBS POLE TO INTERVIEW CROUCH

By DOROTHY R. LANDERS.

“There's a fellow sitting on top of a pole on the Olympia Theatre Building down in New Bedford—go down and interview him,” the city editor told me.

“Want me to climb the pole?” I asked with visions of a possible ride in an airplane.

“Not necessarily, but you can if you want to,” he replied.

Just then I made up my mind that I would climb that pole, and along with a photographer, I was packed off to New Bedford where Victor Herbert Crouch has been perched on the pole for 14 days and vows he will go 17 to break the record.

Even my first glimpse of Crouch, seemingly shaking hands with the sun, failed to shake my determination to join him on his sky-scraping perch.

“Good morning Mr. Crouch. I'm coming up to talk with you,” I said.

“Fine—take the elevator and come right along,” he shouted back.

In a jiffy I was seated on a little board and my hands clutching the rope on each side. Two men pulled on the rope and I started up.

“Don't look down,” the attendants warned me. I shut my eyes, but opened them when I began swaying against the pole. I did look down and didn't mind it a bit. But I did feel as though I would never reach the top and the bearded face of Crouch that grinned above me

Crouch thought he would have some fun with me and called out that he was going to cut the safety knot which was all that stood between me and a good long fall. But he didn't and just grinned as I came to a stop just below him.

There on that swaying pole he told me how he had come to do the stunt and outside of the wind he didn't mind it a bit. He said that he sleeps more than half the time.

HUB-BOUND MILK TRAIN IS DELAYED BY WRECK

The morning's milk for hundreds of Boston babies and the family oatmeal was delayed today through a freigh wreck on the Boston & Maine at Westboro, N. H. A freight train had pulled apart and one of the cars was damaged so that two milk trains, Boston-bound, and which were following, had to be rerouted by way of White River Junction. As a result, the milk, fresh from the New Hampshire dairies, was late in reaching its destination.

PLACE SACCO IN HUB ON FATAL HOLDUP DAY

Placing Sacco in Boston's North End from 12:30 to 1:30 p. m. on the day of the South Braintree payroll murders, by Felice Guadagni, original organizer of the defence committtee, was one of the chief developments of the review of the case today at the State House.

Guadagni told the investigators that on April 15, the day of the South Braintree murders, he met Sacco in the North End at 12:30 o'clock. He said they were together until 1:30, first going to Boni's restaurant in North square, and then to a coffee house at No. 37 North street. At the latter place Guadagi said he introduced Sacco to a man named Dentamaro. He remembered the date because of a banquet. Files of an Italian newspaper were taken before the committee. Guadagni said the paper carried an account of the banquet.

Attorneys William G. Thompson and Herbert Ehrmann, counsel for the defense, were present again today along with Dudley P. Ranney, assistant district attorney for Norfolk County.

Soon after the Governor's investigation got under way today, State Detective Frank Hale escorted a woman witness to the chamber. Albert Bosco, a witness for the defense, also called at the Governor's office.

200 FLEE FIRE ON CROWDED TUNNEL TRAIN

Two hundred passengers, mostly women and children, were herded off a Cambridge tunnel train at Washington street station today as smoke from a hot box under the forward car of the train poured into the coaches.

Among the passengers were seventy small children on their way to a City Point outing held under the auspices of the Margaret Fuller Home.

The train crew attacked the fire with extinguishers while crowds on the station platform looked on. The flames were extinguished without calling the fire department.

The blaze started while the train was en route from Cambridge to Andrew square. The smell of burning waste and wood alarmed passengers, but guards quieted them until the train reached the Washington street station, when it was decided to transfer them to another train.

The train was run “dead-head” to the yards after the flames were extinguished.

1 DEAD, 2 HURT, WHEN STRUCK BY WORK TRAIN

Westerly, R. I., July 15 (A.P.)—Peter Lorrella, 70, of No. 102 Liberty street, was instantly killed, and Charles Orlando and Michael Lewis, the latter a section boss, were seriously injured today when struck by a work train.

The three men, with three others, were riding on a hand car when the approaching train was sighted. All six jumped, but three of them tried to get the hand car off the tracks and were hit.

LINK PAIR WITH ROBBERIES

Two Newton youths today face further quizzing by the police regarding a series or burglaries in Newton and Brookline, following their alleged confessing to Newton police that they had been responsible for twenty three robberies in the two towns.

The police say that the two youths John Mitchell, 15, a student in Newton High School, and Arthur Cummings, 16, revealed the hiding places of their loot which consisted of rare coins, pistols, guns, golf clubs, watches, clothing and jewelry. A watch worn by one of the boys was the clue that first drew the attention of the police to the pair.

DIVER RESCUES TWO RESCUERS

Two Nantasket boys and a waiter at Pemberton Inn today showered praise and thanks on Richard E. Lonergan, 50-year-old swimming instructor at the Pemberton Pool, who saved them from being swept out to sea.

The boys were Frederick Heerde, 16, and William Connolly, 15, who had gone to the rescue of Arthur Vaccatelli, the waiter. The boys, too, were caught by the current which had Vaccatelli in its grip and Lonergan was appealed to. He swam across the current in back of them and brought all three to the beach.

“It was nothing,” he said modestly today. “For years I have been teaching people the theory of swimming parallel to the shore instead of at right angles and have tried to teach them the methods of breathing out through the nose to save their lives.

JAIL RUNAWAY WIFE AND BOY

Mrs. Grace Shepard, 27-year-old Brighton mother, who was thought to have jumped into the Charles River, but who, instead, succeeded eventually in jumping into a Brighton police station cell, was arraigned in Brighton Court today with a 17-year-old Somerville boy.

The pair were charged with a serious offence and each was held in $1,000. In default of bail they were sent back to their adjoining cells to await a hearing next Monday.

Mrs. Shepard, who lives at No. 441 Western avenue, Brighton, left her home at midnight Wednesday with her 7-year-old boy after a quarrel with her husband who returned only this week from Poughkeepsie, where he was almost killed by a falling boom while working as a rigger.

When the little Shepard boy's cap was found floating in the Charles, police began dragging the river.

The husband recollected then that he had seen a strange man leaving the house on his first arrival home and the suicide theory was dropped.

Subsequent searh located Mrs. Shepard and Nicholas Del Verde, seventeen, in a house in Richardson street, Somerville, and they were arrested.

THINK STRANGE WOMAN IS LOST MOTHER OF 9

Dudley, July 15 (A. P.).—A big searching party including Police Chief George H. Reynolds of Dudley, all available officers at his disposal and a volunteer posse of 75 persons from Fabyan, Conn., was organized today to run down the most recent and what the police regard as the best tip uncovered in connection with the disappearance, 12 days ago, of Mrs. Henry G. Willis, mother of nine children.

When John Lipkowski, a Fabyan farmer, saw a strange woman Wednesday at the rear of his farmhouse, he paid little attention to the incident, but when she appeared near the same place again yesterday he told neighbors there was either a crazy woman or a new neighbor in the vicinity who was very shy.

John reads no newspapers printed in English and had no knowledge of the mysterious disappearance of the Dudley woman. But neighbors notified James Rosene, who immediately recruited 150 men and telephoned Chief Reynolds.

Farmer Lipkowski's description of the woman tallies with that of Mrs. Willis.

LONDON WILDLY CHEERS YORK DUKE AND DUCHESS

London, July 15 (A.P.).—Elizabeth, Duchess of York, radiated smiles as she drove with the Duke today through crowded streets from Buckingham Palace to the Guildhall to receive an address of welcome and congratulations from the city on completion of the royal couple's Australian tour. The progress of the Duke and Duchess was marked by continuous roars of cheering.

HEAT WAVE TOLL NOW 11 DEAD IN 24 HOURS

ported today from South Boston, where Alexander McLean, 65, a fireman in the Walworth Manufacturing Company's plant in East First street, collapsed from the heat while at work and died a short time later.

Overhung skies saved Boston at times throughout the day from the intolerable glare of the sun, and thunder showers were predicted by the weather officials. The forecasters declared, however, that relief from any showers would be only temporary, and that the hot wave would continue as long as a high pressure area exists in the southern part of the country and a low pressure area is present along the Canadian border.

The hot winds coming from the South to fill the void in the low pressure area in the North are the cause of all the trouble, according to the weather experts.

HUMIDITY TO BLAME.

A humidity of 80 per cent. was reported at noon, today, and this was responsible, as much as the temperature, for the suffering.

Yesterday's temperature of 94 degrees recorded in the Hub, was equalled by only two other cities in the country, San Antonio, Texas, and Tampa, Fla.

The death total in New England is expected to be increased before the day is over. Many of those who have been prostrated by the heat are in serious condition and expected to die.

Thousands of Boston residents today, as on Wednesday and Thursday, sought relief from the heat in Revere, Wollaston and other nearby beaches.

Deaths directly attributable to the heat wave in the Eastern States today mounted to forty-five. The victims in New England who either directly or indirectly have lost their lives as the result of the heat during the past twenty-four hours are:

N. E. DEATH TOLL.

Alexander McLean, sixty-five, East Fourth street, South Boston, died in a South Boston factory.

Patrick Glynn, twenty-one, of Vernon street, Roxbury, died in the waters of Magazine Beach, Cambridge.

An unidentified man who dropped dead as he was about to enter the waters at L street beach, South Boston.

George Satereades, 28, of Wamesit, drowned in Silver Lake at Wilmington.

A. G. Waters of Somerville, killed by a bolt of lightning while swimming at Miller Falls.

Isaiah M. Browning, Haddam, Ct., a farmer, stricken by the heat while at work on his farm.

Anthony Porolski of Spruce street, Lawrence, drowned while swimming in Canobie Lake.

Lieutenant Thomas E. Sullivan of the Fall River fire department dropped dead.

William F. Gilbride of Brockton found dead of the heat in bed at his home on Spring street.

Thomas C. Bradigan of Walnut street, Roxbury, collapsed on the street and died at Haymarket Relief Hospital.

Edwin Dinsmore of Lowell, pulled unconscious from the Merrimac River and died later in St. John's Hospital, Lowell.

LEAPS FROM WINDOW.

Crazed by the heat, Roy Watson, 35, of Fitchburg, who has been confined to his home by illness for the past ten days, today leaped from the window of his room on the third floor of the Lawrence apartments. He fell fifty feet to a cement sidewalk, suffering a fractured skull and other injuries that will likely result in his death. He was taken to the Burbank Hospital. Watson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Watson of Fitchburg.

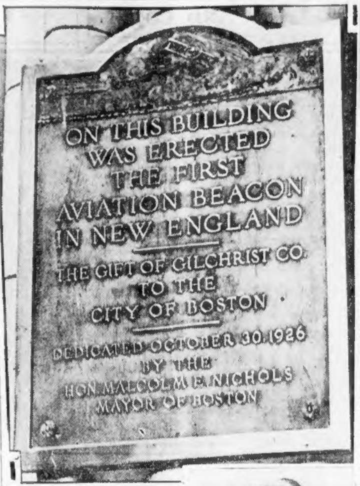
IMPORTANT AIR LINK



MORE NEEDED

Edward T. O'Toole, vice president of the Boston Airport Corporation, asserts that lights are needed at airport and praises Gilchrist Company for its gift of revolving air beacon to city.

Light System Greatest Need at Airport

Edward T. O'Toole, vice-president of the Boston Airport Corporation and first commercial aviator in New England, says Boston is the logical terminal for transatlantic commercial aviation. He urges immediate installation of proper lighting facilities at the airport in East Boston.

By EDWARD T. O'TOOLE,
Vice-President Boston Airport Corporation.

The most crying need at Boston airport are lights for night landing. Suitable lighting facilities should be the first things installed in line with the movement for development. I think the drive for a "Bigger, Better and Busier Boston Airport" has stirred public interest and it is bound to bear results.

With the American Legion on the job, the best business interests alive to aviation possibilities and the special State Commission on Aviation about to organize on Monday, things are looking up in this section. We early settlers at Boston airport have seen it grow, but aviation in all branches has developed so rapidly as to outstrip accommodations at the local field.

LOGICAL TERMINAL.

It has been interesting to watch developments since I started operations here. Commercial aviation is only in its incipient stage, but it is coming with a bang and Boston and New England ought to be prepared.

Boston airport is the logical terminal for European commercial aviation because it is 200 miles nearer than its nearest competitor, Hadley Field, N. J. As it takes an hour to fly from Hadley field to New York City, Boston airport is a full three-hours nearer Europe than New York.

Another feature in favor of Boston is better weather conditions due to absence of fogs prevalent in New York and airports to the South. Added to the fog banks that hang over Long Island sound are the smoke clouds which envelop New York more densely than in Boston, thus affecting visibility.

Granting that an air terminal for transatlantic flights were established in or near New York, the planes would have to pass over Boston.

PREDICTS EUROPEAN SERVICE

Then why not shorten the trip by starting from Boston? I believe regular commercial flights to Europe will come within the next five years, or ten at the outside. The transatlantic planes will carry 30 passengers, mail and express. The Germans now have a plane that carries 110 passengers.

If Boston airport is enlarged and put in first class condition air lines will terminate here from several directions. There will be an overseas line to London and Paris, a line to Quebec and Ontario and possibly Newfoundland and a line to Chicago and eventually beyond, via Albany and Buffalo.

As to the lighting needs, the landing field should be defined by boundary lights, the hangars by flares and I think every tall building and chimney in East Boston ought to be topped by a red danger light for strange aviators in thick weather.

A revolving beacon is badly needed at Blue Hills. That on the Gilchrist Company building is a strong link in the chain and will be made more effective when the airport is properly lighted. I think the Gilchrist Company, as Mayor Nichols said, is to be commended for its enterprise.

FOUR IN AUTO ESCAPE AS BRIDGE COLLAPSES

Montpelier, Vt., July 15 (A.P.)—Burt Lamberton, wife and two children, Mrs. C. W. Houghton and grandson escaped injury during the heavy thunder storm that passed over Plainfield, when the bridge on which their automobile was standing collapsed and went into the Winooski River.

Lamberton had driven the machine onto the bridge to protect those in it against the storm and gale.

FLIER KILLED, ANOTHER HURT, AS PLANE CRASHES

Rantoul, Ill., July 15 (A.P.).—Second Lieutenant Hubert V. Vanatta, air reserve, Buffalo, Wyo., was killed and Benjamin W. Craycraft, A. O. T. C. of Eustic, Fla., was seriously injured today when an airplane Vanatta was piloting side-slipped and crashed to the ground.

BOSTON COUPLE KILL TIGERS ON HONEYMOON

natives built a hut of palm leaves, fastened together with split bamboo. We constructed a tiger blind about two and a half miles out in the forest."

"You don't hunt tigers with elephants," interposed Clarke. "You have to put bait out, a dead animal, tied to a tree, for a tiger will drag its food away if possible. It can drag several times its weight. You go out each morning to see if there are any tracks, and hide behind the blind waiting for the tiger to return.

"When I got mine, I'd been waiting since six in the morning, and was getting tired. I was reading a book, when suddenly I heard the crunching of bones, and there was my tiger. I hit him in the forehead the first shot, and he dropped. Mrs. Clarke was even more eager to get one than I was."

BRIDE SHOOTS TIGER.

"I had to wait three days for mine," said Mrs. Clarke. "At first I was afraid, out there in the jungle alone. But one becomes accustomed to it. The third day, I saw the tiger across the clearing, then he went away.

"Toward dusk, he again came to the edge of the clearing. He was fifteen or eighteen yards away, but I didn't want to lose him. So I fired. The shot entered one nostril, went down the back of his skull, and lodged in his shoulder. He turned and ran.

"I fired three shots, the signal for 'wounded tiger' to the natives, about half a mile away, and they came running. I heard him fall, but it was too dark to search for him then, so we returned in the morning, and found him dead. The one shot killed him."

Barking deer, a species peculiar to the jungles, banting, a kind of wild cattle, twelve-foot lizards, wild boar, and peacocks, were among the other jungle residents to fall before the French army rifles used by the Clarkes on their hunting expeditions.

LEAVE FOR BOSTON.

"You've no idea how delicious those peacocks taste," said Mrs. Clarke. "Our native cook had been trained by a French chef, so we had the finest sort of food."

The bride's "trousseau" consisted principally of gray breeches and hunting jacket, with a wide brimmed gray felt hat—gray, because that color is less noticeable in the dense jungle than khaki.

Mrs. Clarke's interest in hunting dates from the time she was a small girl, when her father instructed her in the mysteries of the army rifle. She bagged her first game—a porcupine—when she was 10 years old.

The Clarkes left San Francisco on the Overland limited on their way to Ontario, where they will visit a few days before returning to Boston, where Clarke is in the banking business.

40 Cars of Ginger Ale Rushed to Quench Chicago's Thirst

While New England, generally, swelters, perspires and fumes in the grip of thep resent heat wave, there are those who can find something to be gleeful about in the strange antler of the weather.

In a town near Boston, for example, there is general rejoicing today. This was brought about by a telegram received at a ginger ale plant there, ardering an entire trainload.

The river of ginger ale, forty carloads to be exact, is wanted in Chicago to quench the parched throats of the heat sufferers in the Windy City. The solid train carrying the moist cargo will start westward tomorrow and will reach Chicago in seventy-two hours.

bors from their houses during the turn-back, all the cries coming from the Laham principals. A number of telephone linemen, working on a pole, stopped their labors for a few seconds to gaze down curiously—then went back to their task again.

A reporter talked with Fred Sebbag, the Northeastern University Law School student whom Eleanor spurned for George Laham.

"Eleanor and I love each other," declared Sebbag. "I proposed to her a year ago and she accepted. Then people started telling her things that were false, and turned her mind.

"An engagement in our orthodox church is equivalent to half marriage. When I met her in Connecticut I tried to kiss her, but she refused. I didn't mind that, because I knew what she had gone through.

"I love her and I know she loves me. I went for her honor.

"I am engaged to her and she is a cousin of mine. If she prefers him now, however, then I would be the last one to try to induce her to marry me, or to influence her folks to induce her."

CRIES HER LOVE.

When the "outside guards" took up their positions, a man relative seating himself beneath a breeze-fluttering tree on one side, another male relative seating himself in a chair on the other sidelawn, and the militat grandmother patrolling the front awn armed with a watering pot.

It was just at this time that pretty Eleanor appeared at a window of the sun porch, cried, "I love him: I love him," and was yanked back into the regions beyond the shade again.

SECRET REPORTS REVEAL PROPAGANDA OF LEAGUE

NEWSPAPERS, COLLEGES DELUGED WITH DATA

your good offices to help him in the mission he will explain to you in connection with the Presidential primaries.

"I stand for maintaining the prohibition laws in their full integrity and for fearless enforcement of the law. The wet leaders are aware of this and are exerting all their energies in fighting me in the primaries. An analysis of the election to date shows clearly the backing of favorite sons and the device of uninstructed delegations in a concerted movement throughout the nation.

"In each case reported we find that the dry forces have been caught off their guard, awakening in some cases only after the election was over.

"Assuring you that I shall appreciate your co-operation, I am, with all good wishes,

"Very sincerely yours,

"(Signed) W. G. M'Adoo."

Dr. Russell, while filing this letter in the records of the executive committee of the Anti-Saloon League stated that other members of the executive committee had received similar communications. Mr. McAdoo got the very active support of the League, but it is needless to recall he lost the nomination.

This case of a candidate for the highest office in the power of the voters appealing for the support of the League is typical. Politicians have stood in awe of the tremendous vote it was supposed to control at elections, for or against certain candidates.

Only 16 Per Cent of Church People Are Contributors

But the Anti-Saloon League confesses in its official records that the vaunted power which it purports to exercise through the ballot is little more than a phantom power.

The League has been able to intimidate candidates for office by the presentation that it is the official organization through which the churches of the country express their will in political action. There are few candidates for office who do not believe that the League is the instrument of a tremendous vote.

Investigation of the records of the League however, brings sad disillusionment. The only source of the League's power is dollars and cents. All its influence is exercised through its collections, expenditures of money, totaling, so far, $67,000,000.

But instead of having many millions of adherents, the private records disclosed the fact that in the League's most profitable year, 1919, it had only 300,000 money contributors out of the 20,000,000 communicants of the church denominations which allowed the League's spellbinders to solicit funds.

In 1919, immeditely following the ratification of the eighteenth amendment, the League was in the zenith of its power.

Some 'Brethren' Do Not Fool League

Secret reports of the Anti-Saloon League reveal that when arrangements were being made for the prospective International Anti-Alcohol Congress at Washington, the League had no illusions regarding "some of the brethren."

In a letter dated April 30, 1919, Arthur J. Davis, a league superintendent, wrote to Dr. Ernest Cherrington, secretary of the executive committee, as follows:

"I want to urge once more that at the Washington convention we eliminate from the program the speakers whose addresses tend to cheapen the entire performance.

"I know how hard it is to sidetrack certain men, but may we not for once have a great convention without having to listen to some of the brethren who have been so much in evidence in the past?"

Hobson Was Drawing Card With Fee of $700 a Week

Its official records show that in that year the League adopted a plan of financial reorganization under which it proposed to raise a fund of $15,000,000 a year, of which $9,000,000 a year was to be spent in maintaining prohibition in the United States, and $6,000,000 a year to prohibitionize the rest of the world.

In this program it was stated that 80 per cent. of the League's income was raised in field day meetings in the 20,000 churches to which it had access.

This number of churches is only 16 per cent. of the churches in the denominations admitting Anti-Saloon League collectors; Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian and Congregationalist.

They are not allowed to solicit in Catholic, Unitarian, Christian Science and many other smaller denominations.

Let us assume that the League gets into as many churches now as it did in 1919 that is, that the League solicitors reach 16 per cent. of the 20,000,000 church members of denominations admitting the League's field day speakers.

This assumption would give the League's collectors access to approximately 3,000,000 churchgoers.

The 1919 "plan of financial reorganization" states the number of church contributors as 300,000. If the same number are contributing today, we should have 300,000 people financing a propaganda organization which aims to be the greatest political power in a nation of 120,000,000 people.

As a matter of fact, the Anti-Saloon League's hold on the churches is not so strong as it was in 1919. By 1921, we learn from the minutes of the executive committee, the number of accessible churches had shrunk from 20,000 to 15,000, a loss of 5,000 churches in two years. The minutes since that date record frequent complaints of the difficulty in getting money from the churches.

Part of the national Anti-Saloon League's funds must be raised by "apportionment" levied upon the States. Some of the State leagues do not raise enough to pay for their own activities. Some States not only have no surplus for the national League, but have to be themselves financed by the national organization.

These deficit States are referred to in the minutes as "missionary States," in contrast with the appellation "nationalized States" given to those which contribute to the national League's funds.

It will be recalled in these revelations that the highest paid barnstormer of the league was former Representative Richmond Pearson Hobson. He got more than $171,000 as salary for speaking for the "subscription department" between 1912 and 1922.

In one of those years he got more than $34,000. How much more Hobson got from the State Leagues, nobody knows. In the Reed hearings it appeared that last year he was being asked by the Pennsylvania State Anti-Saloon League to speak for $700 a week.

It appears that they wanted Hobson as a drawing card to offset the money-getting oratory of Clinton M. Howard of the National Reform Association, another dry concern, which was sluicing off funds that ought to go to the Anti-Saloon League.

Wheeler Says Government Even Turned to League

Clinton Howard was always trying to get ahead of the Anti-Saloon League. The official minutes of the executive committee of Dec. 4, 1925 contains the following paragraph:

"Dr. Shumaker announced to the committee that some committee with which Clinton Howard was connected had sent a communication to the Pope at Rome."

CABLED THE VATICAN

Mr. Howard's National Reform Association had just met in Washington, addressed a sharp letter to the President, "denouncing the present spurious brand of prohibition, and ending up in a blaze of glory by having Mr. Howard send a cable to the Pope, asking him to intervene and help make the United States dry.

The National Anti-Saloon League maintains three publicity offices. One is run by Wayne B. Wheeler in Washington. One is operated by Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington in Westerville, O. One is under the direction of William E. ("Pussyfoot") Johnson in London.

Mr. Wheeler makes a detailed report on "publicity" in the minutes of the executive committee of Nov. 25, 1924, just after the 1924 congressional election which Wheeler looked upon as an Anti-Saloon League triumph.

Wheeler tells that his staff has prepared many magazine articles for publication, "some of which were signed by prominent persons not identified with the League."

This ingenious practice, he says, "enabled us to quote the articles as we could not have done had another not fathered them." He lists religious and secular magazines which ran articles prepared by his publicity men.

Mr. Wheeler then goes on to tell how hopeful he has been in supplying dry congressmen with the material for independent investigations. He tells us, "When a congressman asks for material on prohibition to make a speech, he cannot wait a week for it, he wants it within a day or so."

One can imagine the agitation of congressmen and their relief in getting the soothing information from Mr. Wheeler. He continues:

"Even the departments of the Government have applied to us repeatedly for information about the prohibition laws and their enforcement." The whole world is turning to him: "A number of requests have come from abroad for information on the results of prohibition, either directly or through the State Department."

Mr. Wheeler also answers questions sent to newspaper information bureaus, he primes debates, essay writers and what not in the public schools and colleges. He says:

REAL PROPAGANDA

"Newspaper information bureaus which offer to answer any queries sent them by subscribers, in many cases send to this office all questions concerning prohibition with the request that we answer the question as we see fit. This may be valuable propaganda in the hands of those who really need it.

Fleet Street Is the Base of League's Propaganda Abroad

"American collegians who met the Oxford team of debaters on prohibition were supplied with arguments and supporting data. Students in high schools and colleges, professors who were to lecture, ministers who desire to preach on the subject, Sunday school teachers, social workers and members of women's clubs have received ready-for-use material prepared to meet their special needs."

So much for Mr. Wheeler. Now let us listen to Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, general manager of the publishing interests of the Anti-Saloon League of America, reporting on the activities of this department as of Jan. 1, 1925. He says:

"From our publicity department has gone forth clip sheets, bulletins, printed and mimeographed newspaper stories, together with data for newspaper and general editors, which has had a very wide reading in the American press.

"Large numbers of special articles on various phases of the liquor problem have been prepared and furnished to newspapers, weekly journals and magazines. Literally thousands of such articles have gone out from our publicity department, and have appeared in the press without any personal earmarks and without any indication that they were the product of any department of the Anti-Saloon League.

"Much of such material has not been credited to the League, and yet it has been used to the extent of hundreds of thousands of columns of printed matter in the public press for the benefit of the public and the prohibition cause."

In the report of the "World League Against Alcoholism," a subsidiary of the Anti-Saloon League, covering the five years prior to January 1, 1925, "Pussyfoot" Johnson tells of his London Publicity Bureau:

"My chief activities in England have been publicity, with our offices at Fleet street as a base. From this office we have sent out hundreds of thousands of books and pamphlets, and hundreds of thousands of leaflets, bearing upon prohibition reform.

"Fleet street is the news centre of the world. Within pistol shot of our office is a connection with nearly every news organization and important newspaper on earth.

"Our offices have been the centre of dry information, and through this agency we have been able to get a steady current of dry news into almost every important newspaper on earth, and in every language on earth that publishes newspapers.

"For six years our office staff has daily loaded up with ammunition lecturers, preachers, debaters, teachers, newspaper writers and all sorts of people who are gathering facts regarding prohibition in America and elsewhere.

"There is in England a coterie of forty or fifty chronic writers of letters to newspapers attacking drink and defending prohibition, who get their facts and their arguments chiefly from our Fleet street office.

"We have stocked with temperance books something like 200 libraries in Britain and many in other parts of the world."

Subsidized Organizations Are Maintained by League

Apart from all this specialized propaganda, there is a stupendous total of regular Anti-Saloon League literature. Dr. Cherrington describes it picturesquely in his report to the executive committee of January 1, 1925:

"The editorial conduct of the League's periodicals has included the direction and general supervision of the editorial work of the American Issue, the American Patriot, the New Republic, the National Temperance Daily, the Worker, and the Home and State.

"This does not include additional work done on behalf of the League and the prohibition cause by the general manager of publishing interests in connection with the direction of the publication of the Daily Richmond Virginian during a period of five years, and in connection with other work rendered as officer and co-laborer in other temperance organizations not included in Anti-Saloon League activities.

"To go into any sort of adequate report of the work done through these periodicals would be going too far beyond the limits set for this report. Suffice it to say that the number of copies of these several periodicals published and distributed by this department prior to Jan. 1, 1925, was 152,541,990.

"These periodicals, measured in ordinary book pages of temperance literature, are the equivalent of 7,407,543,792 such pages, which, at the rate of 500 pages per volume, would make a library of fifteen million volumes.

"Estimating the thickness of each such volume at one inch, the library thus produced and circulated through these periodicals in the form of such books would fill a cabinet ten book shelves high and twenty-four miles long. The pages in such volumes if placed end to end would make a ribbon of temperance reading matter which could be wrapped around the world forty times."

The Anti-Saloon League maintains a number of subsidized organizations. One of them is the Scientific Temperance Federation, purporting to be a band if scientists investigating the drink evil. Professor Irving Fisher of Yale University is honorary president of this "scientific" body.

Its "findings" are reprinted by the American Issue Publishing Company, and widely circulated by the league. One of its pamphlets, strangely enough, quotes the Kaiser as in favor of prohibition.

On December 5, 1921, the minutes of the executive committee show that "we have been able in one way or another to care for the expenses of the Scientific Temperance Federation to the amount of about $400 a month." Later reports show that this support continues.

Another subsidiary of the Anti-Saloon League is the World League Against Alcoholism, which in turn finances the Intercollegiate Prohibition Association, to the tune of $20,000 a year.

The Intercollegiate Prohibition Association of course appears before the public as a spontaneous rising of the collegiate youth of the country against the drink peril. Professor Fisher in 1925 was likewise chairman of the board of the Intercollegiate Prohibition Association.

The Anti-Saloon League is well aware of the cash value of prominent names. Early in its career the League enlisted the support of John D. Rockefeller and found his name as valuable as his money in swelling their finances. We have already noted the presence on the executive committee of two millionaires, L. D. Musgrove of Alabama, and S. S. Kresge of Detroit. Another rich and generous contributor is William F. Cochran of Baltimore.

In connection with the Anti-Saloon League's yearning for show window names and personalities perhaps the following may hand a laugh to the proletariat. The League has no illusions regarding "some of the brethren" who in public meeting may be "disgusting to people of education and refinement."

In a letter of Arthur J. Davis, a League superintendent, to Dr. Ernest Cherrington, secretary of the executive committee, dated April 30, 1919, Mr. Davis writes about the prospective International Anti-Alcohol Congress at Washington. Davis writes:

"I want to urge once more that at the Washington convention we eliminate from the program the speakers whose addresses tend to cheapen the entire performance. I know how hard it is to sidetrack certain men, but may we not for once have a great convention without having to listen to some of the brethren who have been so much in evidence in the past?"

Under the same date, Mr. Davis wrote the Rev. Dr. Edwin C. Dinwiddie, then legislative superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League at Washington, and under fire for having misappropriated $10,000 of government money. Referring to the

WALES IN BROWN PAINT LOOKS "TERRIBLE"

London, July 15 (A.P.)—His face smeared with what is known as "grease paint No. 5" until it was as yellow as a golden chrysanthemum, the Prince of Wales took the role of a film actor today in the creation of the picture "Remembrance." The film is being produced by the British Legion and will be exhibited on Armistice day.

"This is terrible!" declared the heir to the throne, as he saw himself reflected in a mirror.

On being assured by the director that he now had a "perfect photographic face," the prince laughed and said:

"Come on. Fire away."

Then while cameraman operated the Prince sat down and wrote Field Marshal Earl Haig, wishing the success of Poppy Day, which the Earl instituted to raise funds for disabled soldiers. He expressed the hope that the enterprise would be even more successful.

BETTY ALDEN'S SOCIETY COMMENT

Scituate Yacht Clubhouse Is Busy Social Centre During the Heated Spell; Helen Wills May Take Part in North Shore Tennis

EVENTS AFLOAT AND EVENTS ASHORE shine out in great profusion in the Scituate Yacht Club's Summertime schedule. Which means that every interlude when the water dogs and amateur yachtsmen are not racing and swimming is devoted to bridge and teas; picnic suppers after moonlight sails; clambakes, buffet suppers and dances; costume parties and children's parties. In fact, the pleasant clubhouse is the social center of the Summer colony morning, noon and night.

TOMORROW IS A FULL AND complete day, for there are two races, a "Junior" and a "Regular" for morning and afternoon, and an evening devoted to Terpsichore. The young fry can swim or sail with the best of the oldtimers, and, as for dancing, they are equal to miles of that. The Read family, Misses Jean and Caroline, along with "Sonny" Read, are to be found at all hours of the day in and about the water—their favorite element — while paterfamilias, Harold A. Read, of Cambridge and Scituate, is one of the regatta committee.

MISS JEAN READ AND JAMES FRASER are "captain and crew" of the sailboat "Fawn," and Miss Caroline and Harold A. Read, Jr. (otherwise known as "Sonny"), sail another small boat with skill and precision. The Misses Catharine and Lyde Wayne, cousins of the youthful Reads, follow the family's predilection for salt water and are perfectly at home in the briny. Some of the others who sail and swim are Ransom Lynch, Timothee Fuller and Pierce Fuller.

MRS. HENRY PARSONS KING, JR.

Society matron comes home today from Europe on the Berengaria. She's a leader in the ultra smart set's younger element.

TO HORSE LOVERS AND FANCIERS THERE'S NO MORE INTERESTING SIGHT IN ALL NEWPORT than the handsome stallion "Fortitude" taking his daily exercise on the lawns at Dudley Place. "Fortitude" is now the possession of Mrs. Frederic Cameron Church, Jr., who acquired him for the sake of family tradition when Sandy Point Farm and the effects of her uncle, the late Reginald Vanderbilt, were disposed of. The handsome horse and Dudley Place both catch the eye as one enters Newport.

LACKING THAT STUDIED PRETENTIOUSNESS OF MANY NEWPORT ESTABLISHMENTS, DUDLEY Place is a fine old mansion, dignified with pillars and the stately lines of the Southern Colonial. As the home of a port collector when Newport was under British dominion, it was confiscated by the colonists and came to be known as a part of the Bull estate. As a Summer home for Mr. and Mrs. Church it is quite in keeping with the unostentatious ways that have endeared the former Miss Muriel Vanderbilt to high and low alike. Mr. and Mrs. Church have concluded their Western trip and will be seen in Newport frequently.

THE CHARLES CHOATES, 3D, of Southboro and Boston, sail away today for a visit to France. They have taken passage via the Rochambeau and will not turn their faces homeward until late August. Mrs. "Charlie" Choate is one of the younger matrons of the ultra set, with an endless array of becoming frocks and the sunniest and most lovable of dispositions. So she's admired and adored wherever she goes. She was Miss Nathalie Bishop and hails from the Big City.

ON THE "BERENGARIA" PASSENGER list appears the names of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parsons King, Jr., arriving in New York today aboard the luxurious liner. Mrs. King is sure to bring back from Paris a trunkful of fetching clothes wherewith to array herself. Like the Choates, the Kings live and move and have their social being within the inner circles of the town's society. Mrs. King, vivacious, dark haired and blue of eyes, wears her lovely clothes beautifully. She'll probably appear in "something from Paris" at next Winter's Senior Supper Dance.

THAT HELEN WILLS, THE Incomparable, comes in on the Berengaria is specially significant to Boston and the North Shore, for there is a possibility that she'll be at the Essex County invitation tournament, the next important event in the tennis cycle. That Boston young women are reaping honors at Agawam goes without saying—Miss Isabella Mumford among them. With a full field of local stars back from Agawam, and the California marvel in addition, tennis week at Essex County takes on a national and international importance.

JOHN W. BLACK, JR., NOT IN ORANGE PARADE

In order to correct an error, which appeared in one edition of the Boston Evening America last Tuesday, July 12, regardig the parades of rival factions of Orangemen, this newspaper wishes to state that John W. Black, Jr., did not head one parade, nor did he march in it or attend the picnic. He is not a member and his only connection with the observance was that he appeared recently before the Street Commissioners to save the parade permit of one faction from revocation. The Boston Evening American regrets the error.

Leave for Seattle

Several delegates of the Supreme Council of the Royal Arcanum left today for the national convention of the body at Seattle, Wash. The occasion also marks the 50th anniversary of the body.

LINDY PROGRAM IS LIKELY TO BE ALTERED

While there has yet been no change in the program to have the flying Lindy on exhibition on the Common and at Symphony Hall on July 22, Mayor Nichols and George H. Johnson, director of public celebrations, are at their wits' end to know how to accommodate the crowds that have already shown their intention of being on hand to greet the colonel.

Thousands of suggestions for entertaining Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh arrive at City Hall hourly by mail and telephone.

City Councilman Michael J. Ward of Roxbury came forward with a suggestion that either Braves field or the Harvard stadium be obtained for the reception. "As Symphony Hall is inadequate to provide for the thousands who are anxious to greet Charles A. Lindbergh," he wrote to Mayor Nichols, "I respectfully suggest that arrangements be made to secure either Braves Field or the Harvard Stadium for Boston's reception to America's hero of the air."

One point decided was that Lindbergh will be brought from the airport to Boston Common via the streets, instead of by ferry.

The most likely route is from the airport out Maverick street to Maverick square, thence out Meridian street and over the Meridian street bridge to Williams street, Chelsea; over Broadway, Chelsea, to the Chelsea bridge and into Chelsea street, Charlestown; past Bunktr Hill monument to Prison Point bridge, then over the Craigie bridge to Charles street, and up Charles street to the Common.

It may be, however, that the city officials will decide to take the aviator all the way by parkways.

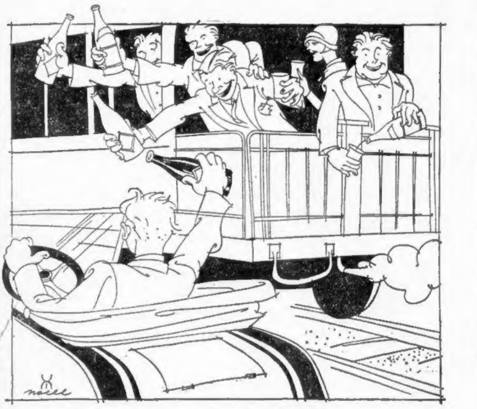
WHERE NEW ENGLAND BUYS ITS FOODS



The Chelmsford Society
GOES ON AN OUTING

Didn't you see them over last week end? Enthusiastic Chelmsfordites with hampers of good food and bountiful supplies of their favorite liquid refreshment — country bound in every motor car and on every train, boat and trolley!

Filmore Flaggens was recognized riding in the rumble of "Lemmie" Porr's well-known Ford, leaving behind him a trail of caps of Chelmsford Ginger Ale bottles stretching from the Common to Lexington — and return.

Doubting Douglas, a drug store cowboy, watching the procession, turns to the soda clerk and says:

"I notice they all ask for Chelmsford Ginger Ale. Why do they specify Chelmsford?"

"Well," says the clerk, "more people are getting wise to it every day. Chelmsford is made with real fruit juice and it has a taste all its own that appeals to both men and women — young and old."

"Furthermore, it costs only 25 cents for a big 4-glass bottle of Pale Dry. People on picnics don't like to carry a lot of little bottles when a few big ones will turn the trick."

"But" says Douglas, "how can they give so much for a quarter?"

"The answer," replied the clerk, "is that the value is all in the ginger ale — no fancy labels, bottles, or tinfoil.

Douglas, convinced, turns and orders a glass of Chelmsford.

IF COOLIDGE KEEPS AT IT HE'LL BE HARD AS NAIL

Rapid City, S. D., July 15 (A.P.).—Fishing and horseback riding are making President Coolidge as "hard as nails."

That is the word of his physician, Major James F. Coupal, who is smiling all over at the enthusiasm with which the President is pursuing these recreational pastimes during the Summer in the Black Hills.

"How do I look?" the President inquired as his physician made his regular call.

"You will be as hard as nails if you keep this program up all Summer," Dr. Coupal replied.

While he goes every day to the executive office, the President is usually back in time for lunch and the afternoons now are being divided between fishing and horseback riding.

The presidential party also has been surprised at the interest shown by Mr. Coolidge in horses which he seldom used before. He added a veteran buffalo chasing horse by the name of Mistletoe to his stables and takes turns in riding him and Kit, the bay mare given him by the Custer Boy Scouts.

Dakota Clyde Jones, Dakota cowboy prize winner, is showing the President the ins and outs of horseback riding and Mr. Coolidge, who saw Jones sticking on bucking bronchos at the Belle Fourche roundup, is interested in getting all the details about riding.

NEW WISHES BERTAUD ALL SUCCESS

New York, July 15.—When Lloyd Bertaud and James Dewitt Hill drive the mighty Fokker monoplane, Old Glory, into the Eastern skies bound for Rome and return, with them will go the prayers and wishes of the man for whom they have carried Uncle Sam's night air mail for the last three years.

He is Harry S. New, Postmaster-General of the United States.

The two fliers received the following telegraphic message from Postmaster-General New:

"Be assured of my best wishes and those of the Postoffice Department with which you both have been so long and honorably connected. May your first stop be Rome and may your flight be the great success for which we all hope."

Bertaud and Hill made applications for their passports. In the passport applications—the first ever granted for a proposed flight across the Atlantic and return—the fliers declared they expected to hop off from Rome between August 10 and 15.

Both Hill and Bertaud will meet the Berengaria when she docks today to witness the unloading of the "Bristol" Jupiter engine on which they will stake their lives in the flight to Rome.

FARMER BLOWS HIMSESLF TO BITS WITH DYNAMITE

Spartanburg, S. C., July 15 (A.P.)—Lying upon a heavy charge of dynamite and touching it off Dock Bradley, 36, a farmer near here, killed himself, his body being blown to pieces.

His head, arms and legs were scattered over an area of 80 yards. Members of his family said the act was due to despondency over ill-health. A widow and five daughters survive.

'NUNGESSER' IN NOTE ASKS AID

Berlin, July 15 (A.P.).—A bottle has been washed up on the shore of Wangeroog Island in the North Sea, Wilhelmshaven, containing the rough sketch of a map and the following note written in French on a scrap of paper:

"Save us. Without break. Without water. On a little island of Atlantic. Nungesser and Coli."

According to the sketch, the bottle was thrown into the sea west of the Bermudas. The matter is being investigated to decide whether it is a hoax.

M'ADOO ASKED DRY LEAGUE TO HELP HIM

same forthcoming "convention." Davis writes:

"I think the committee of sixty should be given considerable prominence, perhaps being placed in charge of a reception to foreign delegates or something of that kind, and perhaps it would be well to have Fisher and one or two other intellectuals on the list of speakers.

"I do hope that in connection with the Congress the type of speaker so much in evidence at our Anti-Saloon conventions will be supressed, and prominence given to men who really stand for something, in the scientific world, and who will omit all the gush and emotional fervor that is so disgusting to people of education and refinement."

In tomorrow's Boston Evening American the secret records of the Anti-Saloon League reveal a dry offer to finance a legislature and a millionaire's contribution to speed up prohibition.

Wheeler Asked Information Regarding John G. Sargent

Burlington, Vt., July 15.—When John G. Sargent was nominated Attorney-General of the United States by President Coolidge, Wayne B. Wheeler, generalissimo of the Anti-Saloon League in Washington, true to form, sought secret information as to Mr. Sargent's qualifications for the post in relation to Anti-Saloon League views.

W. A. Davison

The Rev. William A. Davison of this city, secretary of the Vermont Baptists and advocate of prohibition, received a telegram from Wheeler, requesting such confidential information.

The Rev. Mr. Davison's reply indicated that Wheeler and the Anti-Saloon League could expect to find no puppet in their hands when Mr. Sargent took office. The reply was to this effect: "Temperate but no teetotaler; a champion of every law though rabid for none; devoted to duty without prejudices."

Elkins, W. Va., July 15 (A.P.).—Federal Judge Baker halted court proceedings to order a woman, held by him to be improperly dressed, removed from the room.

After remarking that women coming into his court must dress properly, the judge told court attaches to escort a witness to an anteroom.

The witness adjusted her rolled stockings and returned to court.

WINS HOT CONTEST FOR LEGION DRUM-BEARER

Carl F. Prescott, Weymouth newspapermen, was today chosen after a hot battle between 12 candidates, to carry the huge drum of the band of Post 78, American Legion, chosen to represent the State organization, when it goes to France with the Legionnaires. The contest waxed so furious it was finally decided to select the drum toter by drawing of lots. Prescott will have to carry the music as well as the drum, but he said he didn't mind the added burden.

MILLION LOSS IN BREAD FIRE

New York, July 15 (A.P.).—Firemen standing in paste formed by flour fought a spectacular blaze that destroyed the six-story establishment of the Pechter Baking Company in Cherry street today, causing a loss estimated at nearly $1,000,000.

The firefighters, called out on three alarms, had further difficulty in combating the blaze because of the great clouds of steam that rolled out in the street—caused when water from the hose touched the heated ovens. The continuous hissing of the steam could be heard above the roar of the flames.

Firemen finally ran their hose on rooftops of adjoining buildings and poured tons of water into the seething structure. Two hundred bakers fled into the streets. Firemen ordered out hundreds of persons in nearby tenements for fear the blaze would spread.

Twelve thousand loaves of bread ready for shipment were destroyed.

SOUTH BOSTON MAN GETS SIX MONTHS FOR BRIBERY

Adolph Tully of Fourth street, South Boston, was sentenced to six months in the House of Correction by Judge William J. Day in South Boston Court today when he was found guilty of bribery. Patrolman P. P. Fortin of the headquarters liquor squad testified that Tully handed him $50 during a raid on Silver street, South Boston, several days ago. He was also fined $200 and sentenced to the House of Correction for three months on charges of keeping and exposing liquor for sale. He appealed.

Edison Hunting Out Secrets of Rubber

New York, July 15 (A.P.).—Thomas A. Edison, identified as the world's greatest inventor—but identified most generally as a man whose life is spent among the sparks and spittings of electricity—is today knee-deep in a field of non-conductors—rubber.

From now on—until he makes a discovery which may mean a transformation in many lines of business—Mr. Edison has announced, he doesn't want even to talk to anybody "who can't give me some information about rubber."

For rubber, it has been established, is Mr. Edison's latest research field, his passion. And, having moved for the time being from his New Jersey home to the home of friends at Scarsdale, N. Y., in order to be nearer the scene of his researches, he has surrounded himself with plants, instruments, books and assistants bearing on the raw material.

A picture of how an inventive genius appears when he devotes himself to research in a new field was made available through a friend of the inventor to the Herald-Tribune.

Said the friend: "He's just digging along, doing a lot of reading and experimenting. The outcome depends upon the practical ideas he finds. He is going into this just as he goes into every thing else, with his mind open. If he finds some one or a dozen things which have not been developed he will undertake to convert them and contribute them to the comfort and convenience of modern life."

MOTHER HELPS SAVE 4 IN FIRE

Stoughton, July 15.—Awakened by smoke in her bedroom early today, Mrs. Melvin Leonard of Walnut street aroused her husband with her cries and led the way to the rescue of their three children in an adjoining room. The seven-room cottage was filled with smoke from a fire that seemed to center about the chimney.

Mrs. Leonard, with Dorothy, six months old, in her arms, half-carried and dragged another child, Charles, five, while Leonard carried Melvin, Jr., four, in his arms. The family grouped their way through the smoke-filled hallway, down the stairs and out the front door. As they fled the smoke turned to flame.

Clad only in their night clothing and barefooted, the family ran to the nearest neighbor, a quarter of a mile away, and gave the alarm. When firemen arrived the house was beyond saving. The loss is estimated at about $5,000.

TWO FINED $100 EACH IN AUTO FRAUD CASE

Samuel Messina and Joseph Cavinda, both of East Boston, were fined $100 each in South Boston Court today after they had been found guilty of attempting to illegally procure a license to drive an auto. According to Inspector James Delay from the Registry of Motor Vehicles at Commonwealth Pier, Cavinda impersonated Messina in trying to procure a license.

Story of Love and Intrigue; A Girl Who Kept Her Head and a Tiger Woman

Eddie Wisden, a handsome weakling, believes he is going to marry Lady Meldreth, a rich and socially powerful woman, who is estranged from her husband. He indulges his credit to the limit, becoming deeply enmeshed in debt. Jill, his actress-dancer half-sister, encounters all sorts of financial difficulties, but remains true to her ideals. Under dramatic circumstances, Jill meets Lord Meldreth, who greatly admires her principles and her courage. His generosity makes possible her return journey to London from a distant suburb, where her show has been stranded. She harbors new dreams of happiness in the friendship of his Lordship, but these are soon dispelled. Gladys, Jill's best friend, elopes with a Mr. Watson whom she expects to marry at once. After trying her luck, dancing at Pinaud's, Jill finally secures a position in Hope's Antiques Shop; Lord Meldreth is regarded as a cherished patron there, and Jill learns that he frequently visits the place. Eddie does not know that Lady Meldreth has instructed her attorneys to discontinue all procedure in the matter of her divorce from his Lordship.

Jill makes great progress in the antiques shop and at last meets Lord Meldreth there.

Meldreth invites Jill to the theatre, to witness the performance of Odette, a famous dancer and friend of his. At dinner Meldreth tells Jill he wants his wife to divorce him.

CHAPTER XXVII.

WHEN Jill and Meldreth arrived at the Empyrean, London's largest and best known music hall, the evening's entertainment was in full swing. Odette had grace, the exquisite grace of a heaven-born and highly trained dancer.

While she flitted and spun and tossed upon that vast, light-drenched stage, in her most famous of all scenes typifying the seasons, Jill's private feelings concerning her were in abeyance. She, too, was under a spell. Genius streamed from the Odette as rays of light are diffused through an alabaster bowl. Throughout that all too brief ballet Jill forgot the star's personal significance to herself, and when the curtain swung up for the last time, and the slight, breathless figure kissed fragile, fluttering hands—hands like flowers, butterflies, or whatever she wished to make them express—and turned to Meldreth and exclaimed impulsively:

"Oh, she's wonderful: I've never seen anyone quite like her. How proud you must be to know her! She's simply exquisite!"

"I thought you would appreciate her performance," said Meldreth quietly. "You must meet her now. I telephoned to her hotel that we should be here tonight."

"Are you going to take me to her dressing-room?" Jill asked, a trifle nervously.

"Not personally," Meldreth answered. "Odette never receives men friends behind the scenes. I'll fetch some one to take you."

He went in search of a theatre attendant, handed the girl his own card introducing Jill, and she followed her out of the theatre itself round to the stage door. She was in the familiar world behind the scenes.

Jill's guide tapped on a certain door, and a very faint voice bade them "Entrez." Meldreth's card was submitted, Jill was invited to "step this way," and the attendant withdrew. The door closed and she found herself alone with the greatest dancer in the world, in a flower filled, silk-hung dressing-room.

She looked around expectantly for the pulsating Odette she had seen upon the boards—the sprite with ecstatic limbs and joy-filled face. Instead, she saw, almost with a shock of surprise, a small, frail woman with an ashen face, every scrap of make-up removed, lying upon a couch, a peignoir covering a slight, still painfully breathless form—not a pretty woman, far from a young woman, least of all an enchantress or a snarer of men. Odette, slim as a girl, looked a girl on the stage; but without her make-up minus that wonderfully natural wig of clustering auburn curls, with her own dark hair unfeignedly sprinkled with gray, she appeared forty at least. Jill saw at once that here was a weary woman who had suffered, and before Odette had spoken a word her heart was touched.

"And this is Jeel of whom I have 'eard so much from my dear friend?" She held out a hand in a little gesture that drew Jill to her. "And how you are beautiful, Jeel! I am so delighted to meet you!"

"Madame, it is I who should be delighted, because it is an honor," Jill spoke sincerely.

Here, in the sympathetic presence of the divine Odette, a woman years older than herself, her original feelings of bitterness because the dancer might be associated with Meldreth, died out and passed away altogether, and she could have been her humble friend.

Odette smiled.

"Then let us say we are both delighted, for I was so anxious to see for myself if you are so sweet as my friend describe, and I am not disappoint. You 'ave the skin of milk and roses and the mouth turning up just like 'e say, because you 'ave the gift of laugh. . . . It is a great gift, Jeel, to carry the sunshine with you."

Odette's voice sounded more and more tired. If Jill had known, she was struggling to overcome the deadly faintness that assailed her after every performance: for like the immortal Duse, she was too fragile for her work, for the full spate of genius she outpoured. She was longing for the quiet and peace of her spacious bedroom in one of the lesser-known hotels in London, where a devoted woman companion awaited her and where she would sip a glass of hot water and sleep in a great bed. . . And so, night after night.

FAMOUS IRISH LEADER DEAD

Dublin, July 15 (I.N.S.)—Countess Markievicz, famous woman leader of the Irish Republicans, died today in St. Patrick's Hospital here.

Count Markievicz and Eamon De Valera, former president of the "Irish Republic," were at the bedside.

Countess Markievicz was stricken several weeks ago with appendicitis. Complications developed which resulted in her death.

The Countess, whose life was one of the most adventurous of any woman in history, was sentenced to death in 1916 for a part she played in an Irish rebellion. Her sentence was commuted to life imprisonment, but she was released from prison after serving one year.

Her stormy career during the Irish rebellion was followed by a serious interest in politics, and for the past four years the Countess has represented one of the Dublin divisions in the Dail Eireann. She was re-elected as a member of De Valera's party in the last election.

A HOME PAPER FOR PEOPLE WHO THINK

BOSTON, FRIDAY, JULY 15, 1927

SECOND SECTION

ROBS, JILTS 24-HOUR BRIDE

3 Grin, Pray and Sing on Gallows

FLEECED BY MAIL ORDER HUSBAND

Speeding back from New York City to her home in Concord, N. H., today, is a disillusioned New England woman, whose honeymoon of only twenty-four hours suddenly ended after her "mail order" husband took her from Concord to New York, swindled her of her life's savings and then deserted her in a strange city all within a few hours time.

The woman is Mary Randlett, who says she is 56 and whose home is in Union street, Concord. The man with whom she sought romance and to whom she entrusted her savings is known to her only as Frank P. Davis and his home, the woman believes, is somewhere in New York.

Davis fleeced the woman so completely that the New York police advised the "bride" to give up her search for the missing husband and return to her home and friends in New Hampshire.

"We struck up a correspondence, Mr. Jones and I, after my name was printed in the personal columns of a New Hampshire paper," the weeping bride told the New York police today as she was placed on the train for home.

SHE GAVE HIM SAVINGS.

"We corresponded a lot and then he suddenly came to Concord on Wednesday. He made violent love to me and carried me off my feet. We hunted up a preacher and were married that night.

"We left for Boston, where we spent the night and then we went to New York. My husband kept telling me that what we needed was a love nest along the shore in New York. He told me he knew of such a place he could buy reasonably, if he had some more money, so I gave him $1,000 which I had saved.

"We came to New York. The city was big and strange to me. I didn't know anything about it.

"We went to the Grand Hotel and registered. It was hot and my husband told me I should take a shower bath and cool off. While I was about to step under the shower, my husband suddenly put on his coat and hat.

"'I'm going around the corner for a few cigars. I'll be back shortly,' he announced. I have never seen him since."

BACK TO OLD HOME TOWN.

The bride today realized that something was amiss. She reported her trouble to the hotel clerk. Then she went searching the missing persons bureau of the New York police. After she expended most of her remaining funds on taxicab fare she finally found a Gotham police captain who gave a sympathetic ear to her story.

"Better go back to New Hampshire and forget about this 24-hour husband," the captain told her.

The police phoned the bride's train and started her for her home. Meantime they broadcast a description of the missing husband, but they admitted there was small chance of finding him.

EX-ENVOY WHITE IS DEAD AT LENOX

Pittsfield, July 15 (A.P.)—Henry White, former Ambassador to France and Italy and American delegate to the Paris Peace Conference, died in Lenox this morning. He was born in 1850.

Mr. White underwent an operation three years ago and had been in ill health much since then.

Mr. White was born in Baltimore, and educated in the United States and in France. He came from an old and distinguished Maryland family. In 1879 he married Miss Margaret Stuyvesant Rutherford of New York, a sister-in-law of William K. Vanderbilt. Mrs. White died in Lenox, Mass., in 1916. Their daughter Margaret is the Countess Scherr-Thoss, wife of an officer of the Royal Prussian Cuirassiers. Mr. White in November, 1920, married Mrs. Emily Vanderbilt Sloane, widow of William Douglas Sloane of New York.

In 1883 he entered the diplomatic service as secretary of the United States legation at Vienna, going later to London as first secretary, retiring and then again assuming the office under President McKinley, which he held until 1905, when he was appointed Ambassador to Italy.

Designated by President Roosevelt as the representative of the United States to the International Conference on Moroccan Affairs at Algeciras in 1906 Ambassador White took a leading part in that historic parley, the result of which, it was said, averted a European war.

Appointed Ambassador to France in 1907, Mr. White resigned in 1909, the first year of President Taft's administration.

Mr. White received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws from St. Andrew's University (Scotland) and Johns Hopkins and Harvard. He was a member of 11 clubs in New York, London, Paris, Washington and Baltimore and a trustee of several important scientific, geographic, philanthropic and educational institutions.

CRACKS SPINE IN MAKING DIVE OF 15 FEET

Charles Bolton, Milton Academy student, and son of Chester C. Bolton, floor leader of the Ohio Senate, is fighting death at Peter Brent Brigham Hospital today, with the prospect before him that even if he lives he will be a victim of partial paralysis for the rest of his life. The boy cracked his spinal cord making a 15-foot dive into seven feet of water at Camp Janet, Sharon Heights.

He is being treated by Dr. Gilbert Horrax, famous as a high jumper at Williams a few years ago.

MANY FIGHT TO LOOK AT HANGING

Joliet, Ill., July 15.—One singing, one praying and one cursing—three men dropped to their deaths today from a gallows in the Joliet jail. The trio were hanged for the killing of Peter M. N. Klein, deputy warden of Joliet Penitentiary.

The three were the sole survivors of a band of seven men who escaped from the prison after killing Klein in a daring dash for freedom in which Nathan Leopold, Jr., killer of Bobby Franks, was linked as chief plotter.

The three men hanged were Ricardo Torrez, Walter Stalesky and Charles Duschowski, the latter a man of giant size.

The triple hanging was staged outdoors in a gray veil of fog. More than 700 persons viewed the gruesome scene.

CROWD FIGHTS FOR PLACES.

Those who witnessed the triple execution had fought and struggled for more than an hour to get into the prison enclosure, walled about by a 20-foot board fence.

Preceded by four priests, the three doomed men emerged from the jail at 6:10 o'clock in their march to death. Duschowski was grinning broadly and continued to smile until the white cap was placed over his head.

The three men slowly climbed a dozen steps up to the trapdoor through which they were to plunge three minutes later. Torrez at once was led to the trap and slowly looked up at the noose which dangled over his head.

Stalesky paled and staggered momentarily, but quickly regained his composure.

While Duschowski grinned, Torrez, the first to die, finally summoned a smile to his face and, in a clear voice, shouted, "Goodby, everybody."

LED BOUND TO GALLOWS

Before the doomed men appeared members of the convicting jury were led to reserved seats in front of the others and answered to roll call as Sheriff Markgraf called their names.

It was a carnival crowd. The blood lust of the Roman arenas was prevalent as the mob fought for its vantage points to view the deaths.

But with the clanging of bells, announcing the advent of the three condemned men, a silence settled over the gathering.

First came the sheriff, followed by the four priests.

Two paces behind came Torrez, bound and strapped. With a fixed, fanatical stare, Torrez muttered over and over the prayer he had committed to memory within the last week. He continued this prayer until he reached the gallows.

Salient Points of the Play

Trick 2. At the outset there is some question as to the best line of play. The hand could be cross ruffed, but then Dummy's long Diamonds could not be established and used, since it would be impossible to exhaust the adverse trumps. It appears best to play for the Diamond suit, with a Slam in view if the adverse Diamonds are evenly split. This involves the ruffing of two Clubs by South and also the unblocking by South of the Diamond suit. The unblocking can be effected by discards on Dummy's trumps. Unless the adverse trumps are all in one hand, a remote contingency, the success of the plan seems certain. Even if the second round of Diamonds is trumped, game cannot be endangered. Accordingly at Trick 2, Dummy leads the 6 of Clubs for the first Club ruff.

Trick 6. As the Diamonds were evenly split, a Small Slam is assured.

Tricks 8 and 9. Declarer unblocks Diamonds, enabling Dummy to take the remaining tricks.

Mr. Whitehead will answer questions concerning your Bridge problems. Write to him care of this paper, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope.

12 DIE, 250 ARE HURT, IN WILD RIOT AT VIENNA

Vienna, July 15 (I.N.S.)—Conditions perilously close to revolution prevailed in Vienna today, when Socialist demonstrators, enraged at the acquittal of Fascists charged with the death of Socialists, ran rampant through the city, burned the Ministry of Justice, demolished a police station and attempted to establish their own authority.

The mobs attacked police and troops and there were counter-attacks. The death list is reported as high as 12 with 250 reported wounded. Three policemen were killed.

Cries of "Down with the government" were heard, and ministers were burned in effigy.

The Ministry of Justice was burned, after the demonstrators had evacuated it at the urgence of Mayor Seitz. When the fire brigade entered the building the mobs cut the fire hose.

All traffic has been stopped and telephone wires in the centre of the city have been cut.

The rioters are reported to have sent an ultimatum to the government demanding the resignation of the Cabinet and the police chief, threatening a general strike otherwise.

Municipal workers have struck and many other trade unionists threaten to come out. In the centre of the city the disorders have been quelled somewhat, but excitement is still intense in the suburbs.

FEAR NEW OUTBURSTS.

Fears are entertained that nightfall may bring new outbursts. Clashes between workers and the police are reported from towns near Vienna. The resignation of Chancellor Seipel and Police President Schober is anticipated.

The battling in the streets of central Vienna lasted four hours with the mobs stoning the police and making attempts to lynch them. The rioters began to withdraw when troops were mobilized and opened fire upon them.

SEVERE QUAKE FELT IN BEIRUT; NO CASUALTIES

Paris, July 15 (I.N.S.)—A severe earthquake has been felt in Beirut, but no casualties are reported, according to advices received here.

FEAR DEADLOCK MAY BREAK UP ARMS PARLEY

Geneva, Switzerland, July 15 (A. P.)—Admiral Viscount Saito, of the Japanese delegation, called on Hugh Gibson, the chief American delegate, today for a general review of the situation existing in the tripartite naval conference which continues stationary.

The excitement of the last few days seems to have worried all the plenipotentiaries. They appear to ask nothing better than an opportunity for rest and for reflection on the means of saving the situation.

The spokesman for the American delegation said today that the delegation was willing in principle to discuss any conceivable details of the projected treaty.

QUESTION OF TONNAGE.

He made as a provision for such discussion that the British begin by fixing a total tonnage for cruisers which would be considerably lower than the figures they have already advanced.

The spokesman's statement was in answer to the speech made yesterday at the public session by W. C. Bridgeman, First Lord of the British Admiralty and Britain's chief delegate at the conference.

Mr. Bridgeman, during his speech, alluded to the American objection to a fixation of the size of smaller cruisers and their armaments.

VIEW OF AMERICANS.

The Americans continued to express the belief that the British must reduce the total tonnage if it is hoped to sign a treaty. This view is maintained because of the Japanese insistence upon a low cruiser tonnage which is even stronger than the American insistence.

It is known that the latest British proposal brings the total cruiser tonnage for Great Britain and the United States to about 400,000 tons. The British are said to deem this a considerable concession.

Gamblers Fined $25 Each

Blackstone, July 15 (A.P.).—Twelve operators of gambling games in the Hall and Anderson Canadian Shows, a traveling carnival, arrested last night by State troopers, were fined $25 each today on pleas of guilty.

The Count of Monte Cristo — By Alexandre Dumas

Next Edmond bought his island and became a nobleman, "the Count of Monte Cristo." Some time later in the catacombs of Rome he rescued Albert de Morcerf, the son of Fernand and Mercedes, from bandits. In return, he asked Albert to introduce him to society when he visited Paris. Albert gladly agreed.

The Count of Monte Cristo appeared at the house of Albert de Morcerf. He was liked by the young man's friends, one of whom was Maximilian Morrel, the son of Edmond's benefactor. But the Count's iron control faltered when he met Mercedes, now the Countess de Morcerf, for she seemed to recognize him.

Next, he bought a country house. His steward, Bertuccio, hated the place, and finally told his story. The house had been owned by Villefort, who had imprisoned Edmond. Bertuccio had sworn to kill Villefort because of a feud, and had found him at this house with a beautiful woman not his wife.

One night Bertuccio had seen Villefort steal from the house with a box, which he buried. Bertuccio stabbed but did not kill him. He then dug up the box and found in it a baby, which he revived and adopted. But the boy was a rascal and ended in the galleys.

WHY AMERICAN WAGES SHOW INCREASE

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, July 15.—Americans produce half as much again per person as they did at the opening of this century.

Here is one cue to our extraordinary growth in prosperity.

How has this increased production per worker been made possible?

EIGHT contributing factors follow:

1.—More machinery.
3.—Better use of power.
3.—Increased use of electric power in the place of other power; substitution of oil for coal.
4.—Mass production.
5.—Standardization of products.
4.—More efficient methods and labor-saving devices.
7.—Elimination of waste.
8.—More careful planning of production.

* * *

ALSO, THE SHOWING of total present-day production per worker has been greatly swelled by a pronounced swing from industries calling for much labor to industries calling for less labor. For example, petroleum has been taking the place of coal; cement is more freely used in place of brick, stone and lumber in building; baker's bread has been displacing home-made bread; the phenomenal growth of the automobile, so very largely a machine-made product, has also affected the national picture.

B. C. Forbes

HOW IS this great increase in our ability to produce going to influence the future of industry? W. Thomas, research and statistical expert of the Federal Reserve Board, in an exhaustive study of our growth of production and rising standard of living, published by the Academy of Political Science, reaches this conclusion:

"One group of observers views with alarm consumers' expenditures on automobiles and so-called luxury goods, and another wonders when the large investment of savings in new building and equipment will result in over-production. There is a limit to the amount of staple products of consumption that may be used; therefore ANY GROWTH IN CONSUMERS' CAPACITY MUST BE REFLECTED IN DEMANDS FOR NEW PRODUCTS; and the production of these new products must require larger capital equipment. This, in brief, is what analysis of the recent growth of production indicates has occurred."

MAY I venture to add that, in my humble judgment, one main reason for our large production per person and for our unmatched national prosperity, is that so very large a number of Americans throw more zest into their activities and find more joy in their work than the people in other lands.

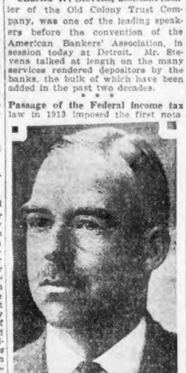
STEVENS TELLS OF SERVICE BY BANKS

By FRANK H. MELOON,
Financial Editor.

Charles W. Stevens, assistant cashier of the Old Colony Trust Company, was one of the leading speakers before the convention of the American Bankers' Association, in session today at Detroit. Mr. Stevens talked at length on the many services rendered depositors by the banks, the bulk of which have been added in the past two decades.

* * *

Passage of the Federal income tax law in 1913 imposed the first notable addition, the large banks having to add new departments to handle coupons, etc. "Boston was one of the first cities in the United States to give free service by automobile in the collection of deposits and the delivery of payrolls," says Mr. Stevens.



CHARLES W. STEVENS.

Col. John W. Prentiss of Hornblower & Weeks can't give land to the city for a public park in the Eastern Point section of Gloucester. U. S. Attorney Frederick A. Tarr argued "The proposed gift is simply a place for motorists to park their cars. It would be a case of human beings not behaving like human beings to stay in this place and not cross the road toward the shore and over the land owned by Summer residents."

* * *

Retarding New England's rapidly growing Summer industry, you find in many towns a distinct feeling of antagonism (is it based on envy?) toward Summer residents. The non-resident property owner ought to be at least as much considered as the resident who owns no property and pays only poll taxes, it would appear. But why make any sort of distinction, as long as each conducts himself agreeably and in accordance with the law? We are all Americans, or ought to be.

* * *

Home towns and cities welcome the automobilist, and wish him to park comfortably. Outstanding examples are Newport, N. H., and Old Orchard, Me. No doubt there are many others. The number will increase. There is a lot of genuine good-will in New England without any mercenary foundation for it. The spreaders of bad will are those who trespass on their neighbors' property in disregard of signs, who invent slander and who try to arouse class antagonism. Certainly they are comparatively few in most communities, but unfortunately often make themselves the most conspicuous. Perhaps you have suffered from such.

* * *

Returning to John W. Prentiss. You will recall all those A. M., A. B., Ph. D., etc., degrees bestowed by our several colleges last month. Well, write "I. B. A." after Colonel Prentiss' name. As president of the Investment Bankers Association of America he first became nationally famous. Born in Bangor, Me., and educated at Harvard. Offered Henry Ford a billion for the "flivver" company and had the money in sight to make the offer good. Ford didn't accept.

Ought Ford to have accepted the Prentiss billion? Who knows? Perhaps even time won't tell. Ford sales have slumped seriously since the billion was offered. A lot of people think they will come back in even more spectacular fashion. The only Ford stock traded in on a big stock exchange is Ford Motor of Canada on the New York Curb. Speculators are backing their belief in Ford wizardry by buying, it would appear. The stock has just moved to a new high for the year at $556 a share, up $12 from the previous close.

Brokers of questionable calibre devised ways and means for selling Ford of Canada to investors at prices away above the actual market. The better class of brokers, business bureaus and even the Ford concern itself warned against buying. New York barred sales. To many of those who held on their purchase has unexpectedly made good. The latest Ford rise was partly in response to reports that $15,000,000 was appropriated to advertise the new Ford cars, which will make their appearance by the middle of August.

William F. Merrill has resigned as president and director of the American Pneumatic Service Co., and also as president and director of its subsidiary, the Lamson Co. Merton L. Emerson, vice-president and secretary of the American Pneumatic Service Co., is acting president pending the election of a new executive head.

ANOTHER TRUCKFUL OF FUTURE ASSETS

FURNITURE CO. GIVES OUTING

More than 150 children from the West End Community Centre are forgetting the heat of city streets today as a result of the "bang-up" outing they had as guests of the Morgan Furniture Company of 757 Washington street. It was the initial outing of a series conducted by the firm in an effort to bring joy to the little folks of the crowded city districts.

A dozen big trucks carried the youngsters to Franklin Park, where there were sports and games. At noon lunch, with cool drinks and ice cream, was served. The outing lasted until well toward night, when the tired, but happy, little guests were taken home.

on flying machine attack against the enemy's principal cities.

Thomas A. Edison has been three days in New York's botanical library, searching for some new rubber plant. He may find it, but it will probably be chemistry, not botany, that will supply the new rubber. Elasticity, plus wearing quality, are needed. Human intelligence will produce something better than rubber, just as it produced something better than wood, in the bronze and iron ages.

"Big Steel," that pays 7 per cent. on seven hundred millions of common stock, to say nothing of "preferred" and bonds, lifted itself to a new high price yesterday. If you bought at 126, and if everything goes well, you may live to sell it at 326. If you bought at 126 and things DON'T go well, and directors conclude to reduce the 7 per cent. dividend to five or four, you may see it go where it was a little while ago, to 79. DON'T GAMBLE.

General Motors stock went up four points, and many a bear's heart strings tightened. Poor bears think the market OUGHT to go down, but somehow it won't go down and stay down.

Bobby Jones is in the lead with a score of 72 for eighteen holes yesterday, making 140 strokes for his first thirty-six holes in the British open championship. That means much to millions, although it has in reality not much real meaning.

Sarcastic Fans | Lewis Busy Champ
Boston and Baseball | Has Made Fortune
Landis Must Ponder | Can't Last Forever

By Nick Flatley

LANDIS MUST WEEP FOR BOSTON BASEBALL

JUDGE KENESAW M. LANDIS, sitting on the sidelines at Braves Field, watched the home team boot a ball game away, and heard the sad, sarcastic yell of the native fan. Right there the Judge must have pondered on the mournful state of his $65,000 pastime in this village.

Nick Flatley

Hizzoner tries to improve the national pastime whenever and wherever possible, and he may turn his thoughts toward Boston. He could see in his two-hour visit that constant failure has worn away the patience even of the spectator who goes out regardless of defeat or position in the race.

The Judge knows that Boston used to be a great baseball spot, although the glory was before his time. Baseball has been growing more prosperous under the Landis rule, but it can never reach its peak until Boston comes back into the paying field.

Fans here have been the fairest and most good natured in the country. They still get all steamed up when one team or the other wins a few games in a row. But the annual recurrence of wrecked hopes and dreams is beginning to tell.

The army of regulars is disbanding, slowly but surely. The faces and the voices that have been present over the years aren't around so often nowadays. The dyed-in-the-wool boys have been driven to golf and the beaches, or even work, for afternoon fun.

The catcalls that rang in the Commissioner's ears, while the Braves were struggling futilely, may turn his serious attention to the matter of bolstering up weak clubs for the good of the game.

No business that is lopsided can survive and flourish. Baseball is that way. The big, rich clubs make enough money to go 'round, almost. Owners of tail-end clubs have to lose what they invest, and bear it, hoping for miracles.

It's a sour condition, and will have its effect, even though the Babe Ruths and the Gehrigs are packing them in. Finding a solution, however, is a job that will tax all the resources of a $65,000 brain.

HOT WEATHER SLOWS UP THE FIGHTERS, BUT IT DOESN'T AFFECT THE TYPEWRITERS.

A keen analyst has no trouble discovering that Dempsey is the man tearing demon of old, and also a doddering, broken-down wreck, while Sharkey is faster than Jim Corbett and at the same time more awkward than Joe Grim. The boys don't seem to know what it's all about

LEWIS HAS MADE MORE THAN ANY OTHER CHAMP

STRANGLER LEWIS, the busiest and most consistent professional champion of a decade, does his stuff at the Arena tonight. The Strangler has been picking them up and tossing them down since the days when Jack Quinn was breaking into big league baseball.

The finger of suspicion has been pointed at the sincerity of the mat game with more than passing frequency. The boys have been heard to remark that lots of the matches are in the satchel, as they put it coarsely

But the fact remains that the champion keeps wrestling, and winning. The promoters can laugh off the various charges flung at their beloved pastime, because nobody has been able to pin anything real on anybody, and the fans continue to go out to see the big boys and get hilariously enthused.

Lewis has made more money in sport than any other living man. He can't go on forever, and the crowds that cheer his victories keep on coming out, with the hidden hope of seeing him knocked off.

This Garkawienko bird that he tackles tonight looks like a block carved out of the Rock of Gibraltar. He weighs almost a ton and is said to juggle elephants for exercise with all the deftness of a child's window magician turning flapjacks. He hails from the Ukranian steppes, which Dora Dumb says must be awfully firmly constructed, else he'd cave them in.

He may be in line to wear the crown. This is a year when champions seem to be flopping regularly. He should be a tough nut for the venerable, but still powerful and ambitious Strangler.

Sharkey's Cut Is 15 Percent If He Fights Tunney

New York, July 15.—Tex Rickard today submitted to Johnny Buckley, manager of Jack Sharkey, contracts calling for a bout with Gene Tunney for the heavyweight championship of the world and for the defense of the title in the event the Boston contender is successful in conquering the Hermit of Speculator Lake.

The Tunney contract will become effective in the event Sharkey defeats Jack Dempsey in their 15-round tussle at the Yankee Stadium on next Thursday night.

By the terms of the Tunney contract Sharkey is to receive 15 per cent of the gross receipts after deduction of State and Federal taxes.

Sharkey will reap his golden harvest in the event he upsets Tunney. The contract as champion gives Sharkey a guarantee of $500,000, with a privilege of accepting 50 per cent of the receipts.

Buckley delayed signing the contract pending legal advice. It is likely that the legal details will be ironed out by the first of next week.

Sharkey's manager insists that if the Boston heavyweight conquers Tunney that his first title bout must be held next year. He will give Rickard until July 1, 1928, to name Sharkey's opponent. Such a clause will be inserted in a revised contract.

Buckley says he will also insist that Rickard post $200,000 to carry out the terms of his agreement.

Buckley has also received four offers for Sharkey to battle Paulino, the Spanish woodchopper, after the Dempsey match.

Humbert Fugazy of New York and Tom Goodwin of Boston are among the bidders for the match.

Sharkey is anxious to fight Paulino, as he figures he can beat him, but his bouts with Dempsey and Tunney will probably delay such a meeting until next year.

Dempsey Followers Told Sharkey Has Very Feeble Liver

By FRANKLIN GRANT

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., July 15—All the boys and girls around here who are vociferous members of the Jack Dempsey Rooting and Tooting Association were visibly cheered by Bob Smith, a fattish sort of man in middle life with a bald and shiny dome.

"Jack Sharkey suffered [illegible] knockouts that don't appear in the record books and Sharkey [illegible] can't stand up under a [illegible] to the body," spoke up Smith [illegible] manager and trainer of [illegible] gladiators who came [illegible] to give Dempsey a look-see.

It happened while he was in the navy fighting under the [illegible] "Battling Skee" added Smith [illegible] was the name Sharkey had [illegible] on the Cruiser Denver.

"A fellow named Biff [illegible] biffed Sharkey in the liver with [illegible] left hand that ended Sharkey. A negro who called himself Young [illegible] Walcott cracked him there with a left hook and that finished Sharkey. Then along came Jim [illegible] who hit him in the same spot [illegible] and out went Sharkey. I guess that bird's got a bum liver or something like that for after [illegible] became pro this Romero Rojas smacked him there—and that ended Sharkey. Maloney dropped Sharkey in one of their fights about every time he reached his liver.

"And I hear that when Sharkey fought Mike McTigue he sagged all over the premises when Mike hooked one into the same liver.

"What do I think about this fight? Well, I'll bet about 10 to 1 that Dempsey hits Sharkey in the liver with a few left hooks. If Sharkey can not stand up when bimbles like Crowley and Ryan and Young Wolcott and Rojas swipe him there how can anybody figure he will take one of these pile-driver hooks of Dempsey and go along as if nothing happened?"

Whereupon great cheers were emitted by the legions that are natives here, or just encamped, and whose admiration for Dempsey as a human being has provoked the proud and oft repeated hope that he will knock Sharkey into a prolonged coma.

It's long been an established fact that Sharkey hasn't the stoutest hands in the world. Now Smith has afflicted him with a non-punch-proof liver. If someone promptly will endow Sharkey with a glass jaw and break a couple of legs everybody around these parts will be quite happy.

There are some days around these habitats when this Rooting and Tooting Association is supremely confident that Dempsey can annihilate [illegible] when Dempsey [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] with a pair of [illegible] [illegible]

Sandown, Eng., July 15 (A P)—Lord [illegible] won the Eclipse Stakes [illegible] here today. The [illegible] was second and [illegible] was third [illegible]

[illegible] six lengths. There was [illegible] length between second and third.

The betting was 11 to 10 on [illegible] and [illegible] to 10 against. The stakes were £1,500 ($7,500). The distance was 1¼ miles.

Mrs. Hurd Has Four-Stroke Lead

Groton, Conn., July 15 (A. P.).—Playing steady golf while her opponent found frequent traps, Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd of Merion, former national champion, was four up at the turn of the final match in the women's invitation tournament at the Shenecossett Country Club here today. Miss Maureen Orcutt of White Beeches, N. J., runnerup last year and medalist of this tournament, had constant trouble on the outward round.

WRIGHT WINS MATCH FROM M'PHAIL

SEMI FINAL ROUND

W. J. Wright, Jr., Albamarle, vs. W. A. Whitcomb, Worcester.

E. E. Lowrey, Norfolk, vs. Alex Chisholm, Sandy Burr.

By BILL GRIMES

Having come [illegible] the fourth round, Fred J. Wright of Albamarle [illegible] defending champion, and John W. [illegible] of Worcester are playing in the upper [illegible] the semi-finals this afternoon at the Charles River Country Club [illegible] E. E. Lowrey of Norfolk and Alex Chisholm of Sandy Burr are fighting it out in the lower [illegible] for the honor of being [illegible] in the annual Massachusetts amateur championship.

Fred Wright [illegible] for Billy McPhail of [illegible] this morning, winning 4 and [illegible] Whitcomb ran [illegible] 5 and 4 [illegible] Lowrey put out Ellie Mar[illegible] 3 and 2 and Alex Chisholm [illegible] 20 holes eliminated [illegible] of Bass River.

Wright jumped McPhail [illegible] the first three holes [illegible] on the first hole started [illegible] off on the wrong foot [illegible] putts on the second green [illegible] two down and he dropped [illegible] holes when he was short with [illegible] second going to the third.

Wright increased his lead to four when he got a birdie three on the eighth and then McPhail won the first hole of the match when [illegible] ran down a long putt for a two on the ninth. McPhail cut down another hole with his second consecutive birdie at the 10th.

Going to the eleventh McPhail was on nicely from the tee with Wright on the top of the bunker [illegible] of the green. He got a 3. But the champion, playing a beautiful shot put his second to the edge of the pin and got a half.

They halved the twelfth in fours [illegible] going to the thirteenth McPhail after putting his second shot almost [illegible] the fourteenth, was strong with [illegible] and lost the hole to a four.

Wright was home at the 14th with McPhail in the rough to the left of the green and as his second shot hit a tree. The best he could get was a five and he was four down as Wright laid his approach putt dead and was conceded a three.

McPhail had a fine chance to hold the match in at the 15th but he took three to get in from the edge of the green and it was all over when they halved the hole with five.

Hub Heavy Says He'll Drop Dempsey In One Punch If He Can

By JACK CONWAY

NEW YORK, N. Y., July 15.—Jack Sharkey's battered staff of sparring partners today received an opportunity to recharge their bruised bodies with new energy as the Boston heavyweight contender took a day off from gym work.

[illegible] weighed 194 pounds [illegible]

[illegible] Sharkey [illegible]

When he came out of the ring [illegible] Thursday morning [illegible] when one of his trainers [illegible] he was working too hard.

"I'm not [illegible]," said Sharkey. "I can start heavy work."

At the Garden gym Sharkey boxed two rounds each with Johnny [illegible], Marty [illegible] and [illegible] Les Gates and Rocky [illegible]. He punched away at the [illegible] for a round and [illegible] one round [illegible] skipping the rope.

JACK VERY CONFIDENT

"I feel in better form than at any time since I started training," Sharkey said to me in his dressing room. "I'm in condition right now and am anxious to get this fight over with. Then I'm going up to New Hampshire for a three weeks' vacation after which I'll start training for Tunney."

I remarked to Jack that he must feel pretty confident of defeating Dempsey when he is already making his plans for the Tunney match.

"Of course I'll lick Dempsey," he answered. "I'll do the job in a single punch if I can.

"I have been fighting a lot [illegible]

NEW COLORS FOR BOXERS.

[illegible]

The speculative [illegible] Sharkey at [illegible] 9 to 5 [illegible] Sharkey will be [illegible] ring time.

Billy Gibson, Tunney's manager, told this writer he believes Sharkey was gaining strength with the bettors each day and that he may be even as heavy as a 3 to 1 choice.

I think the arrival of western money will prevent such a thing happening. The final odds will probably be 10 to 6 or 2 to 1 Sharkey.

Gotham Cabby Predicts Hectic Fight Night

By Jack Conway

NEW YORK, N. Y., July 15—I found Mr. Boston talking with the old cabby who has a stand outside of the Astor on Broadway from midnight until 4 a. m. You know those are the hours when blase New Yorkers, unable to sleep on account of the intense heat of the city, like to ride in open carriages.

"New York will have its greatest night on [illegible] Dempsey and Sharkey fight," said the old cabby. [illegible] around town that night [illegible] that September evening [illegible] been knocked out [illegible]

Mr. Boston

"I was [illegible] in New York in those days. When the boys got the news from the newspaper bulletin boards, they started to cut up a wee bit. I [illegible] that a great many [illegible] when the [illegible] bulletin boards. Nowadays when a fellow hears the result of a fight over the radio he merely takes off his slippers and [illegible] into bed. In the days when the newspaper bulletin boards were the only news [illegible] the gang, the boys would hire a cab and drop around to a few friendly places when the bout was over. I have known gentlemen to ride around in my cab [illegible] and [illegible] place until 6 a. m. the morning after a heavyweight scrap.

"Somehow this Dempsey-Sharkey [illegible] has got the old spirit up again. I understand that as many people as can get into the Yankee Stadium are going to forget all about their radio sets so that they can see the punches fly at close range.

"I IMAGINE when it is all over that quite a few of the boys will drift into the Roaring Forties and Frantic Fifties. Of course they will be warm and maybe a little bit thirsty. And I'll do my best to show them the town.

"I hate to take the boys into some of the places they insist on going. They rob them and give them [illegible] thing. I never was strong for hard booze, but I don't think beer or light wines ever harmed anybody."

The cabby stopped talking. He sat there on the driver's seat, his legs crossed, a [illegible] in one hand [illegible]

"THERE'S not many of you old cabbies left," said Mr. Boston.

The cabby [illegible] in the air.

"There [illegible] I guess there must be [illegible] in New York. It [illegible] for a [illegible]

"I [illegible] the job until 4 in the morning. [illegible] through the parks on Summer evenings. [illegible] prefer a horse and [illegible] [illegible] I don't see anything.

"I'm [illegible] He's [illegible] years old now and I have driven him around the streets of New York for [illegible] 11 years. When Prince lies down and dies, I guess I'll do the same.

"My carriage was originally the property of a [illegible] I have been offered [illegible] for it [illegible] worth that much to them [illegible] to me. It has many memories.

"New York has had many changes during the 41 years that I have driven my [illegible] And I sometimes think [illegible] changes have not been for the best. The prohibition [illegible] is one of the matters I'm referring to.

"Yes, [illegible] in the moonlight."

The old cabby beckoned [illegible] started for his carriage.

"[illegible] to Mr. Boston. [illegible]

THE meeting between Jack Dempsey and Jack Sharkey strikes me as being strickly a battle between a slugger and a boxer. I cannot get into my mind the idea that Dempsey can be transformed into a boxer in three or four weeks of training. I must regard him simply what he has been through the years—a slugger.

And even though Sharkey knocked out Jim Maloney I cannot [illegible] his record, [illegible]

Jack Sharkey in Danger of Beating Himself, Corbett

By JAMES J. CORBETT
Former Heavyweight Champion of the World

New York, July 15.—To use an old phrase, Jack Sharkey is his own worst enemy. He stands a mighty fine chance of defeating himself.

[illegible]

THEN IT HAPPENED

[illegible]

You never can tell [illegible] happen.

The man who fights Dempsey successfully must be [illegible] and [illegible] Sharkey [illegible] his training has shown me none of the fine [illegible] of either Tommy Gibbons or Gene Tunney.

The Boston sailor has a greatest weakness in his tendency to take too many chances. He allows his arms to drop—dangerously. He's too confident.

He telegraphs everything.

This may illustrate what I mean. Sharkey is fast and fairly clever. The first instinct of a clever man fighting a [illegible] hitter [illegible] for self preservation. Now Sharkey has [illegible] and is just as big as Dempsey and just as strong, but all his cleverness is wasted [illegible] of defense in the [illegible] He may go right through with it and get away with it because Dempsey cannot box and depends solely on his punch.

But who are the men who have [illegible]

DEMPSEY SLOWER.

On the other hand we all know [illegible] good Dempsey [illegible] have sized up [illegible] When Dempsey [illegible] ring on July 21 he will present a psychological case.

[illegible]

One thing is certain. If Sharkey [illegible] his speed [illegible] and his equal strength, attempts to slug with Dempsey, the effect is going to be dangerous for Sharkey.

But oh, what a first four rounds they are going to be. I expect the customers to be up on their hind legs most of the time.

Cottage Woven, Hand Wove, Irish Tweeds, Suit to Your Measure and I Don't Care How Big You Are $12.75

To my knowledge nobody in the country sells genuine Irish Tweeds under $60 to measure. I also have some fine Scotch Tweeds and some wonderful American Tweeds, light to dark in colors, and my offer of Two-Piece Suit to measure for $12.75, irrespective of size, will be as low in price as an all-wool Tweed has been sold since 1914.

Mail Orders. Per my usual custom I will send samples of these Tweeds to any part of the United States, together with simple system of self measurement, on receipt of 2c stamp. I have these Tweeds that I make up into two-piece suits, in 12, 14 and 16-oz. materials. Kindly designate whether you want light or dark fabrics, also weight suitable to your needs. No charge for size.

As is my custom at this season of the year, all Uncalled for Suits are taken from my outside stores and placed in my Boston store.

Suits selling as high as $20—$25—$30 will sell as low as $10.00. All ready to wear out.

Uncalled for Trousers as low as $2.75
Knickers as low as $2.75

Notions About Mental Diseases

Correct Manners Explained

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Your articles on "Good Manners" are certainly appreciated in this home and have been a great help to me.

1. My husband's father and mother are coming to us for a visit. Both are quite elderly. How shall I make the proper introductions to our friends?

2. When pickles and olives are served at dinner after a [illegible] and soup, how should they be eaten?

3. Are the small coffee spoons to be used at all [illegible]

ANXIOUS TO KNOW.

YOU made me very happy by your charming comment, and I am very appreciative of your kind words. Thank you, dear friend.

1. When you introduce the father and mother of your husband you might say to your close friends, for instance, "Mrs. Allen, this is Tom's mother," and to less close friends "Mrs. Underwood, this is my husband's mother."

In family introductions of this kind, it is best to make them as informally as possible and therefore, unless it is necessary, not to mention the last name. However, it is not incorrect to add the name if you wish. You can say, "This is Tom's mother," with [illegible] deference that [illegible] duct [illegible] a very [illegible]

Flies . . mosquitoes . . roaches

No bug gets away. Every fly and mosquito in a room dies when Black Flag is used. And this master killer completely rids a home of roaches.

Black Flag is thorough because it kills in a different way. Bugs breathe it—and strangle to death. They cannot avoid it. It contains a secret, vegetable ingredient that is fatal to every kind of insect pest that invades your home. But it is absolutely harmless to humans and animals.

Black Flag also kills and rids a home of fleas, ants, moths and bedbugs. Try it. Two forms—Liquid and Powder. Equally deadly—buy the one you prefer.

In a little town of the Middle West, [illegible] woman. For four months she had been in such poor health that she could not stoop to put on her own shoes. Unable to do her work, unable to go out of doors or enjoy a friendly chat with her neighbors, life seemed dark indeed to Mrs. [illegible]

One day a booklet was left at her door. Idly she turned the pages. Soon she was reading with [illegible] interest. The little book was filled with letters from women in conditions similar to hers who had found better health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"I began taking the Vegetable Compound," Mrs. Daugherty writes, "and after I took the third bottle, I found relief. I am on my eleventh bottle and I don't have that trouble any more, and feel like a different woman. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to everyone I see who has trouble like mine. I am willing to answer any letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Ed. Daugherty, 2208 Orchard Ave., Muscatine, Iowa.

Fads and Fashions

Shaded Shetland Sports Suit is one of the latest novelties in sports togs. The slipover sweater, with square or V neck, is formed of horizontal stripes, starting with the palest tone and having the deepest tone, of the same color, at the hem. The skirt is entirely of the deepest shade.

Cornering the Monogram Mode—Flat envelope purses of fancy leathers or silks, have elaborate corners of enamel and marcasite showing effective and artistic monograms traced in the marcasite or outlined in the semi-precious stones.

Surprisingly Sensible seems the one-piece bathing suit made entirely of rubber. Developed in two tones of the same color, this practical little surf garment is so obviously desirable that one wonders why no one ever before thought of making a suit from the same sort of rubber as the average bathing cap.

Paisley Pongee Pouch Purses with large kerchief squares of pongee, also printed in the paisley design, make very attractive accessories for the sports costume. These purse and scarf sets are often supplemented by belt and hatband to match.

BOOK REVIEW

"Maurine" by Ella Wheeler Wilcox. Published in 1901.
Characters—Maurine La Pelle, her sweetie, Vivian Dangerfield, and her girl friend, Helen Trevor, who comes to visit Miss La Pelle.

It seems that the two gals were making considerable chin music, or as the author puts it—

"Two little birds that never tire of humming
About the garden in the summer weather
Aunt Ruth compared us, after Helen's coming."

They talked all night, "speech never halting in its speed of zest, save when our nodding heads later lit it rest," and didn't get up the next day until 1, and then took a walk. To quote—

"The clock chimed 3, and yet we strayed at will
About the yard in morning dishabille,
When Aunt Ruth came, with apron over her head,
Holding a letter in her hand, and said
'Here is a note, from Vivian, I opine
At least, his servant brought it. And now, girls,
You may think it no concern of mine,
But in my day young ladies did not go
Till almost bedtime roaming to and fro,
The very pictures of forlorn distress,
'Tis 3 o'clock, and time for you to dress.
Come read your note and hurry in, Maurine,
And make yourself fit object to be seen.'"

When all the blandishments of life are gone
The coward sneaks to death, the brave live on —Sewell

Let no man presume to give advice to others that has not first given good council to himself.
—Seneca

[illegible]

It is easy in adversity to despise death; he does real fortitude who dares to live and be wretched.

DAILY SHORT STORY

WELL MATCHED

By L. M. Blake

EARL DURTON [illegible] in a [illegible] [illegible] Know [illegible] [illegible] twenty [illegible] Marguerite [illegible] Morville [illegible] he said, "but one [illegible] as Mr. [illegible] [illegible] Mr. [illegible] to Lew Craig. "Really, young man, you'd better think my proposition over very carefully [illegible] John Craig was [illegible] [illegible] The four [illegible] [illegible] with a [illegible] Earl Durton [illegible] of the Morville [illegible] Blue Peaks [illegible] That [illegible] "Look at [illegible] [illegible] "It's a bet," [illegible] [illegible] ingeniousness [illegible] reflecting [illegible] his own self. [illegible] Nothing personal, [illegible] of course."

Earl Durton stiffened and snorted [illegible]

"Boys," Mr. Morville [illegible] sternly. "I expect you to act like gentlemen."

At the ball park next afternoon, Marguerite, Mr. Morville and Earl Durton occupied seats in the grand stand [illegible] between [illegible] [illegible] The game began. In the first [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] South City [illegible] Blue Peaks [illegible] [illegible] men on base [illegible] [illegible] Blue Peaks [illegible] This was one game he wanted to win. If he took the [illegible] South City in [illegible] [illegible] the next [illegible] both going out on flies to the [illegible].

[illegible] the ninth inning. The first South City man [illegible] [illegible] a home run [illegible] "Slim" Craft walked the next man putting the tying run on first base with no outs.

"You're in," the man said to Craig, adding fiercely: "Stop 'em dead." Then he mentioned "Slim" Craft to the clubhouse.

Lew Craig did not trust himself to look toward Marguerite and the [illegible] as he began to pitch. He knew that the girl wanted him to [illegible] Durton was fervently hoping he would be knocked out of the box and that Roger Morville was not greatly concerned one way or the other.

The first man up bunted out, but [illegible] to second. The next man, after fouling half a dozen times drove a fast grounder to the Blue shortstop and was out at first, for the man on second had [illegible] it safe and refused to try to [illegible].

Craig felt some better. Two outs. Only one more and the game would be over.

O'Toole, the league's leading hitter, walked to the plate. Craig looked toward the bench. "Pitch to him," was the order, "but don't give 'em anything."

Craig tried a fast one, just outside the plate and high. The slugger refused to bite. "Ball one," boomed the umpire.

A sweeping curve served better. O'Toole swung after it. A drop. And the batter nipped it for a foul. "Strike two."

"He thinks I'll waste one," Craig told himself. So he pitched a fast one with a hop on it.

KERRACK!

Wood met leather fairly and the ball sailed deep in center field territory. Fast fielding held O'Toole on second base, but the tying run scored standing up.

Craig swore under his breath. "Such is life," he ended. "That blooming Durton will think I let O'Toole hit that one."

He pitched cleverly to the next man and the fellow fouled out to the catcher.

In their half of the ninth the Blues could not score. The tenth proved a blank for both teams.

In the eleventh inning the South City team got a man on [illegible] but he "died" there. Blue Peaks, in their half, started out weakly. The first man filed out, the second struck out.

Craig came to bat. The South City pitcher was nervous and Craig worked him for a base on balls. Then, on a hit and run play, [illegible] Carson drove out a two-bagger and Craig slid home safe.

Which ended the game with the score:

South City 4, Blue Peaks 5.

That evening, at the Morville home, Craig said happily,

"We won! But it was some battle."

"Bosh!" growled Earl Durton. "There was too much bet on the Blues so the South City team had to lay down."

Craig and Marguerite exchanged glances.

Even Mr. Morville's mouth twisted in silent amusement. He got to his feet.

"Durton," he said, "come in the library with me, I want to discuss something with you."

When they were alone, Marguerite said:

"Dad has made up his mind. You'll have to give up baseball or me."

Craig [illegible] her hand and pressed [illegible]

"[illegible] baseball," he muttered [illegible] I'm afraid we'll starve on what I'll make as a [illegible]."

Then the great front doors of the [illegible] were thrown open and [illegible] stalked out. He [illegible] his hat and hurried down the street.

Mr. Morville [illegible] joined Marguerite and [illegible] on the veranda.

"[illegible] Durton," he announced [illegible] is no longer connected with the Morville Company."

"What—what was the trouble?" Craig asked.

"We [illegible] statement yesterday that seeing crookedness in everything [illegible] crookedness set me to thinking. Material [illegible] have been going astray at the factory. So I investigated, put two and two together and—[illegible] Craig, you'll just have to come to work for me. In the office, not on the road. You'll grasp office management problems quick enough. And [illegible] a factory ball team on the side. Say you'll [illegible]."

Craig looked at Marguerite.

"All right," he said, and held out his hand to bind the bargain. "The game will be new to me and I may play it in dumb fashion. But you can be sure, sir, I'll play fair and square."

THE MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE

By HELEN ROWLAND

MOST men begin to think tenderly of home and "the little woman," only when they have reached the mellow "Sweet Adeline" stage.

* * *

It is almost as hard for some men to get along with one flirtation all Summer as it would be for them to get along with only one pair of white golf knickers.

* * *

No man ever consciously and intentionally ties up to matrimony for life. He merely "docks" for a while; unloads his grouches, troubles and superfluous emotions, and then wants the hawsers thrown loose.

* * *

A man loves a woman only so long as she is lovable; but a woman is supposed to go right on loving her husband, automatically, until the judge tells her to stop.

* * *

Somebody is always telling women "how to hold a man's love"—just as though any love you had to grasp, CLUTCH at, and tie down was worth holding!

* * *

Most people spend half their courtship in telling each other how WONDERFUL they are—and the other half in thinking how they are going to "remodel" and "reform" each other after the wedding.

* * *

Why throw away your old wedding-rings? Some time you may make a very interesting collection of these, to be handed down in the family as a memento of "Grandma's girlish triumphs"!

THE WITTY SAYINGS OF MEDBURY

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

HENRY FORD announces that within a few years he'll have a million flivvers in the air. That shouldn't be difficult to accomplish, it's hard enough to keep his cars on the ground.

HE got his idea from a Ford that flew off the handle while the owner was trying to crank it.

SEVERAL bald headed men are trying to rent out their skulls as landing fields.

ONE fellow who drinks a lot says that his nose would make a wonderful beacon.

THESE planes will be so small that people can use bird nests for garages.

AFTER this when you hear a horn honking you won't know whether to look up or down.

PEDESTRIANS will have to carry fly-swatters.

INSTEAD of a motor, Mr. Ford is going to put a bunch of homing pigeons under the hood.

HE'S stealing Luther Burbank's stuff. He plans to cross the country with a piece of tin.

HIS planes will be built for two passengers, which means that you'll be able to crowd seven or eight into them.

MR. FORD isn't saying much about his new plane. He's keeping it under his hat.

THIS leads us to believe that every derby will be a hangar.

THESE machines are very easy to drive. A mechanic took one of them out on a test flight the other day and made a forced landing in the Smith Brothers' beard.

HE got very indignant and said it was the first time his whiskers had ever been taken for Curtiss Field.

THEN he yawned and the pilot almost lost his plane.

THE mechanic asked him if he'd kindly sneeze and give him a start.

IN "taking off" he dug up part of a mustache and never stopped to replace the turf.

AIR flivvering is bound to develop and it won't be long now until all the birds will become pedestrians.

What Do You Say?

(In radio prize contest.)

Cut down the power of WGY and WJZ to 5000 watts each. Their enormous power causes their waves to spread causing interference with other stations. Before June 15 the stations that were nearest to WGY and WJZ were distant stations. That is why trouble did not occur. As a remedy for those that have this trouble I would advise them to remove from 15 to 25 turns from their antenna coil. This will not cut down volume, but will increase selectivity and will deliver stronger volume. For those that cannot get WEEI and other high wave stations I recommend adding 15 to 25 turns on the antenna coil. I feel sure that these two suggestions will improve New England conditions 100 per cent. if tried.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S PLATFORM FOR BOSTON AND NEW ENGLAND

For BOSTON:
1—Clean streets.
2—Solution of traffic and parking problems.
3—Better pay for honest public service.
4—An airport SECOND TO NONE.
5—Erection of a MUNICIPAL AUDITORIUM to compare with any in the land: in order that Boston, properly supplied with first-class hotels, may be the premier convention city of the U. S. A.

For NEW ENGLAND:
1—Weld the six States into a unit through the activities of the New England Council, thus creating a community consciousness.
2—Promote intercourse with Central and South America, encouraging New Englanders to "turn to the sea" again.
3—Keeping everlastingly at the job of telling the rest of the country all about our unique advantages as Summer and Winter Playground of the Nation.
4—Foster the prosperity of our industries through (1) greater efficiency in production and (2) the use of modern methods in merchandising.
5—Promote in every way such natural resources as forests, water powers and fisheries.
6—Assist New England agriculture to better marketing methods.

"Mr. Hearst Exposes the Anti-Saloon League"

The following editorial is from the New York Evening Post of Wednesday:

MR. LOUIS SEIBOLD, in our columns yesterday, took Mr. Hearst's current expose of the "inner records" of the Anti-Saloon League as one more sign of the possible downfall of Mr. Wayne B. Wheeler as generalissimo of the prohibition forces at the national capital. As he sees it, many League officials believe Mr. Wheeler has gone too far in his absolutism and that, if a victim is needed, he will "lose his yellow jacket as field marshal."

The articles in the New York American have revealed a condition that is shocking to any American sense of democracy and representative government. They show a small body of men seeking through under-cover methods and with amazing success, to have laws framed as they want them, administered by men they want, in the way they want and through courts and prosecutors whom they want. They paint a picture of the Anti-Saloon League which is bound to bring revolt, whether it involves Mr. Wheeler's downfall or not.

Of course, much similar if not identical matter was brought out in the investigation made by Senator "Jim" Reed's famous Congressional committee. Indeed, it is said that the Senator, who is now supported by Mr. Hearst as a Presidential candidate, may have pointed out to the publisher the interesting material which he is now presenting.

Interesting it is in its impudent threat against free government, if nothing else. The first picture is of nine members of the Anti-Saloon League's executive committee meeting in Chicago, November 8, 1925, and finally deciding by a majority of but one vote that they would not in their high mightiness issue a proclamation accusing the executive branch of the Federal Government of "misfeasance or malfeasance" and asking the President of the United States as "the only officer charged in the Constitution with the responsibility of enforcement" what he is going to do about it. By but one vote these grim autocrats missed sending forth a pronunciamento that might well have suggested to one of their fanatical satellites in Congress that he move the impeachment of the President.

The shocking feature of this incident is again the enormous assumption of power by a group of men holding no elective office in the Government and responsible to nobody.

So runs the theme. They bedeviled poor Harding. They had Daugherty where they wanted him, and extolled him highly a month or two before his fall. They put constant pressure on Coolidge. They forced the flaccid but orthodox Haynes into office as prohibition director. They paid Congressmen and Senators vast sums as collectors and orators. Their records show Richmond Pearson Hobson as receiving $171,000 in four years. They had their own secret service, and through it they got information to get men whom they wanted appointed as Federal customs men, district attorneys and district judges.

Coolidge and Mellon were not stampeded by this tyrannous pressure, even if they could not openly fight it. On the final showdown they did not appoint Haynes permanent prohibition director, even though he was the one particular light-haired boy of Mr. Wheeler's heart.

In the old days two evils were dramatized before our eyes. One was called the "liquor evil" and the other the "saloon evil." The first represented excessive alcoholism; the second meant the organized power of rum in politics and government. Many friends of the American theory fought the latter even more keenly than the first. They saw the saloon man interfering in government. They saw him controlling nominations, swaying elections, seeking the laws he wanted administered by men he wanted and judged by men he wanted. They saw, in fact, the saloon ring doing to our Government exactly what the Anti-Saloon League is now shown to be doing today.

We no longer have the saloon; we have the blind pig instead, and we have an under-cover liquor evil instead of a regulated one. What all reasonable people want is something free from the evils of both old and new systems, something that can be attained by a sensible modification of the Volstead act. The irresponsible tyranny of the Anti-Saloon League stands in the way of that advance. Both it and Mr. Wheeler will have to go before this country is many years older. The Hearst expose is aiding the double departure.

The Sun Shines

On New England Industry

Among the barometers of business conditions are postal receipts, new building construction and bank clearings.

How do they read with reference to the Boston district?

POSTAL receipts in the month of June amounted to $1,388,368.70, an INCREASE OF $84,100.17 over the same month last year.

New England contracts for NEW BUILDING, in the week just closed, were the largest ever recorded for the same period except in 1925; the amount was $7,435,700, a JUMP of more than $1,000,000 over the figures for the corresponding week of 1926.

Boston's total BANK CLEARINGS, for the five-day week to July 7, were $568,000,000, or $52,211,000 MORE than in the corresponding period of 1926.

In the item of postal receipts, two other New England cities did proportionately better than Boston, which in volume of business stood fourth among the postoffices of the country.

New Haven LED the fifty selected cities in percentage of increase, with an improvement of 17.73 per cent., while Worcester, with an increase of 13.39 per cent., ranked THIRD.

The more favorable situation of New England cotton mills is revealed by a study of weekly aggregate mill payroll figures compiled by the New Bedford Chamber of Commerce. For the week ending July 2nd the disbursement was $634,265, as compared with only $562,885 for the same period a year ago.

In other words, we in this neck of the woods are "doing quite well, thank YOU."

And it won't be long before we are doing much better. Keep moving!

SOCIETY AT LARGE A FORGOTTEN MAN

By DR. FRANK CRANE

CHIEF JUSTICE TAFT in an address the other day said: "If there is not somebody or organization to look after the forgotten man—that is, society at large—we are not going to have such an improvement in the administration of the criminal law as we ought to have."

The trouble with most people's sympathies and opinions is that they are strictly personal. It is easy to raise a hullabaloo about punishing a criminal because our interests are centred in one individual.

The criminal, however, may have swindled hundreds of people in a stock jobbing deal, or killed many people in a wreck, or done some other dastardly wrong, but his victims are largely anonymous. Because of their vagueness we do not have much interest in them.

The criminal is concrete.

People do not get much kick out of a God or a devil who are merely vague forces. They want a personal God and a personal devil if their belief is going to bite into them very much.

Too often in the trial of criminals there is thought only of the man, and our thought of him is equally wrong, whether we think of him who ought to be pardoned or upon whom vengeance should be wracked.

We forget that other man, that is, society at large, whom he has injured.

We are sympathetic with the drunkard or the dope fiend. He is a man like us, we can see him and feel him, but the number of people whose lives he has made miserable is somewhat indistinct. So the "wets" utter more piercing cries than the "drys" and the condemned criminal who is the object of persecution by policemen, lawyers, judges and juries arouses more sympathy in us than the victim of his crimes, who is apparently forgotten.

Law ought to be something to protect the forgotten man and it ought to be so administered as to look after his interests.

In every trial by jury there is an indispensable third person present. He represents the person who has been wronged and the common interests of all of us.

The question at law is not merely how much one man has wronged another, but how much wrong a single man has done against the interests of us all.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

A thing may look specious in theory and yet be ruinous in practice. A thing may look evil in theory and yet be in practice excellent. —Burke.

Dear are our parents, dear are our children, our neighbors, our companions; but all the affections of all men are bound up in their own native land.—Cicero.

But pleasures are like the poppies spread,
You seize the flower, its bloom is shed.
—Burns.

BOSTON DAY BY DAY

IN the American Academy of Arts and Sciences on NEWBURY STREET is the first plaster bust of BENJAMIN FRANKLIN. The sculptor poured a plaster head of the great statesman and philosopher, signed it and presented it to the American Philosophical Society. This society in turn gave it to the academy in the first decade of the nineteenth century.

"Rubber tired car tracks" are the latest innovation of street railway experts. In Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, where apartment houses flourish, it was deemed necessary to plan some method of laying street car tracks which would eliminate, to a certain extent, noises. Experts decided that by laying rubber between the wooden ties and the rails that noise would be lessened. Thus the "rubber tired car tracks."

W. IRVING BULLARD, formerly vice-president of the Chamber of Commerce, likes motor-boating because it is safe and still exhilarating. But because boats are slow on city streets, he always planes when in Europe. Bullard says he has flown over all those parts of Europe that planes regularly fly over and this includes many thousands of miles.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

HAVE you ever been the victim of a Habitual Liar—one of those unpleasant humans who lie, fib, scheme, plot, deceive, invent, prevaricate and fabricate for the sheer love of making trouble?

Yes? Then you're going to feel for Ann H.

Dear Miss Robinson:

Could you tell me what you think is the matter with a girl that does nothing but lie? There are only three of us in the family—my brother—a sister and myself. We are all married and get along fine only for the terrible fault of my sister in lying. She has lost nearly all her friends; her own don't want even to speak to her because she lies so much.

Now she has almost succeeded in breaking up my friendship with a girl that has been my chum for eight years. When you confront her with it, she lies out of all of it and throws all the blame on the other person. She has only one child and is about to have another—so I really don't like to say anything to her while she is in that condition. She has been that way all her life—but she is getting worse as she grows older.
ANN H.

It is very hard to diagnose or treat habitual lying, Ann, for such lying isn't merely a sneaky trick, it is a symptom of sickness—the result of a sick mind.

Kinds of Liars.

Sometimes the mind is sickened by envy—sometimes it is weakened by fear—sometimes it is dreadfully warped and diseased by some taint of insanity.

Many people lie and invent malicious schemes and tales because they have a secret resentment against certain other people or against the whole world. Sometimes in families one member of the family will feel that he, or she, has been neglected or abused. This may begin in childhood and persist through life. Lies, in that case, become revenge for fancied wrong. They usually take the form of vicious stories, intended to hurt the people who the liar feels have wronged him.

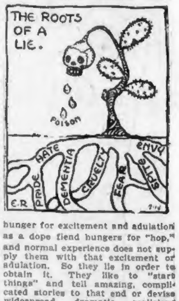
Other habitual lies come from fear. Not passing fears such as cause the usual fibs, but a permanent attitude of fear which influences the whole character and influences the reaction to any incident, however trifling. Such a person's moral nature curls up like a jelly-fish whenever it is menaced by conflict or criticism. It lies in defense and is forever inventing alibis and excuses.

We all recognize these two forms of liars and consider them normal, though troublesome and unreliable. But there is another class of habitual liar who is not normal and who often is extremely dangerous.

These are the people who lie as they breathe, who live in a lie world. In a vague, distorted way these people know the difference between lies and truth, but they lack the moral sensitiveness which makes lying abhorrent to proud, healthy people. They are really irresponsible, although they often seem clever and crafty.

Lie From Cowardice.

Such people lie from cowardice and resentment, but another element also enters into their dishonesty. They are "neurotics" with distorted emotional natures. They hunger for excitement and adulation as a dope fiend hungers for "hop," and normal experience does not supply them with that excitement or adulation. So they lie in order to obtain it. They like to "start things" and tell amazing, complicated stories to that end or devise widespread, dramatic, malicious plots involving many people. They also invent flattering stories to draw the spotlight on themselves.



Sometimes these poor souls are obviously insane and can be easily recognized and guarded against. But more often they inhabit that tragic border line between sanity and insanity, the nature of which is so baffling to even our greatest scientists.

"Are they crazy?" we ask in anger and despair as we see them attack one life after another.

God only knows where their natural "human cussedness" ends and the awful blight of insanity begins. Perhaps in some happier land hereafter. He can free such poor tangled minds from their snare.
